SEATTLE GAS PUMPS IDLE

Times News Services

Eighty-five to 90 per cent of service stations in the Puget Sound basin will be closed by Friday unless the Cost of Living Council "stops nit-picking and foot-dragging" and allows gasoline price increases, the director of the Automobile Club of Washington predicted today.

"Our policy is not to issue scare announcements but the outlook for this weekend looks serious," said William Merry.

"The shutdown has already begun in the outlying areas and there is evidence it is beginning in Seattle," he said.

Meanwhile, motorists mobbed the tanks in California Tuesday after filling station operators who had been closed for four days to protest the freeze on gasoline prices reopened, pronouncing their protest a "tremendous success."

Gas Main Blast, Fire Gut Four City Shops

By DON VIPOND and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

A city shoemaker was badly injured this morning when a gas explosion blasted his tiny store on Oak Bay Avenue, triggering a fierce fire which destroyed three other stores and damaged a church hall.

In fair condition at Victoria General Hospital is Perikles Parisis, 53, of 867 Daffodil. He has multiple burns and cuts, a broken arm and leg.

Parisis was finally pulled from the wreckage by Capt. Robert Cherneff, Tommy Black from the city fire department and an unidentified civilian.

The blast, at 9:40 a.m., turned the store at 1840 Oak Bay Ave. into a pile of kindling, shattering windows in the vicinity. Within seconds flames swept through the debris, spreading swiftly to an adjacent toy store and beauty parlor which eventually were destroyed.

A Ukrainian church hall on the other side of the shoe repair store, apparently empty at the time, was severely damaged.

Crews for B.C. Hydro have been blasting a trench for underground wiring along Oak Bay Avenue in front of the fire site. Plumes of flame from gas mains alongside the trench fed the fire.

Asked the cause of the explosion, city fire chief Eric Simmons said: "There is no doubt about it — the (gas) main was ruptured."

Ted Nies, manager of the Oak Bay Pet Hospital, right across the street, said after the blast he ran to the rear of the wreckage where the shoe store had stood.

He could hear a man's voice inside yelling "help, help" but there was no way he could dig into the debris to reach him.

The blast broke all but two of the windows in the pet hospital.

Ron Dunnett, one of the workers in the trench, was in a manhole when the explosion occurred. He said one of his co-workers was caught in another manhole but is reported to have been rescued.

"The blast was so strong it knocked a bottle of shampoo from one of the stores across the street," Dunnett said.

Dunnett also said a gas crew cut the gas line and sealed it within minutes after the explosion.

The city's yellow fire trucks and police cruisers clogged the street, with officers repeatedly warning a swelling crowd to get back because of the possibility of another explosion.

A maze of fire hoses were linked to every hydrant in the area as firemen poured streams on to the blaze without checking it.

Proprietors of The Toy Shop, alongside the blasted building, were on vacation at the time and the store was closed.

One early report said the explosion was in the Little Wonder Confectionery. Also destroyed was the Renee Beauty Parlor.

Veterinarian Alan Hoey, who was operating at the time of the explosion, said immediately following the blast came the crash of shattering glass at the front of the hospital.

He ran to the waiting room, fearing one of his receptionists might have been cut but she was uninjured. Then he noticed flames spurting from the trench across the street and the building behind it shattered.

He returned to his surgery, scrubbed again and completed the operation.

Ed Norman, who lives in an apartment across the intersection from the fire, said the blast shook his windows. The

OIL SPILL 'COULDN'T HAPPEN'

Times News Services

The federal transport department opened an inquiry Tuesday night into the oil spill "which shouldn't have happened," resulting from the ship collision in Vancouver harbor.

"It's incomprehensible to me how the two ships collided in the first place," Environment Minister Jack Davis said after examining the site.

"They would see each other . . . the weather was good . . . I just don't understand it."

S. T. Clarke, chairmn of the Pacific Pilotage Authority, said pilots were aboard both vessels when they collided.

Thousands of feet of oil booms, oil slicker-lickers, truck-loads of peat moss and hundreds of students were thrown into the fight to keep area beaches clean after

Resignation Up to Agnew

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House said today that vice-president Agnew has discussed the possibility of resigning with President Nixon. A spokesman said Nixon neither encouraged nor discouraged him.

Confirmation by deputy press secretary Gerald Warren of recent rumours that Agnew had considered resigning came moments after speaker Carl Albert swiftly turned down Agnew's request that the house of representatives rather than the courts undertake an investigation of political wrongdoing against the vice-president.

Warren said that Agnew's decision to try to get the house to open an inquiry into kickback allegations against him was made solely by the vice-president.

Although Nixon discussed various options with Agnew in four meetings they have had since the allegations were announced, he exerted no pressure for any particular course, Warren said.

Warren said for the first time that the two had discussed the possibility of Agnew resigning for the first time when they met Tuesday morning, prior to Agnew's request to the house for an investigation.

Agnew requested the House hearing in a letter to Albert.

He contended that a grand jury investigating the same allegations has no constitutional authority to do so as long as he is in office. The grand jury investigation is scheduled to begin Thursday.

After a conference this morning with House Democratic leaders, Albert handed

Storms Kill Five

OMAHA, Neb. (CP) — Five persons were believed killed and scores injured Tuesday night as 20 or more tornadoes hit the central U.S. plains.

Heavy rains falling on water-logged ground started floods in Kansas and Nebraska.

As many as 100 were injured, and communications were knocked out, a Red Cross spokesman said.

The spokesman said there was no electricity within a 12-to-15-mile radius of Clay Center. Fifty buildings in the town had major damage.

Meanwhile, Hurricane Irah whipped across the peninsula of Baja California and churned toward the Mexican mainland today, carrying fierce rains and winds expected to top 100 miles an hour.

Bourassa Calls Vote

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Premier Robert Bourassa has called a Quebec general election for Oct. 29, dissolving the Quebec national assembly after only 3½ years in office.

The announcement came as no surprise to the province's three opposition parties.

"It was evident this government could not take it any more," said Opposition leader Gabriel Loubier of the Union Nationale.

The Bourassa government is paralysed by internal dissension and scandals, said Loubier, calling the election "a cover-up operation."

The Liberals also were trying to cover up the failure of the James Bay power project and their promise of 100,000 new jobs made in the last provincial election, he said.

The Parti Quebecois greeted the election with a statement saying "the Liberals have acted more out of panic than strategy."

The statement criticized Premier Bourassa for making the election announcement "in a pre-recorded speech using a studio that is sheltered from the indiscreet questions of reporters."

Tanker Runs Doubled

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Atlantic Richfield (Arco) refinery at Cherry Point has doubled its number of tanker deliveries through the Strait of Juan de Fuca following a cutback on crude oil available by pipeline from Canada.

A company spokesman said at least three tankers bring crude oil to the refinery each month now, instead of the previous rate of three every two months.

The refinery uses 100,000 barrels of crude oil daily, and gets 58,000 barrels per day from the Trans Mountain Pipeline running into Washington from British Columbia.

The Canadian government has reduced the flow of oil into Washington State by 20 per cent in order to assure that Canadian refineries have adequate supplies.

The cutback at Arco is 15,000 barrels per day.

The tankers bringing oil to Cherry Point from the Middle East are about 70,000 tons, with the largest being 120,000 tons. The largest vessels carry just under one million barrels of crude oil.

The 477,000-ton supertankers expected to carry Alaska oil to Cherry Point will hold 3.5 million barrels.

The company said it was forced to bring increased oil by tankers as a direct result of Canadian government policies in cutting back its pipeline supplies.

"We have to get the oil from somewhere," a spokesman for Arco said. "If it doesn't come by pipeline it has to come by tanker."

The company lodged a protest with Ottawa saying it should get special consideration because it supplies CP Air with jet fuel. The protest, however, was rejected.

Meanwhile, three other Washington State refineries are also affected by the Canadian pipeline cutback.

Texaco, which has a refinery at Anacortes, said it has not had to seek tanker supplies so far but will have to when plant expansion is completed in April.

Shell at Anacortes and Mobile Oil at Ferndale also say they will have to study the possibility of bringing crude oil in by tankers because of the Canadian cutback.

Hughes Tried To 'Own' Nixon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Hughes gave $100,000 in cash to Bebe Rebozo for President Nixon in 1969, and $50,000 in 1968 to then vice-president Hubert Humphrey because he wanted to "own the president," a former top aide to the billionaire recluse has charged.

The accusation was made by Robert Maheu, who is involved in a bitter legal battle with Hughes.

In court depositions made public Tuesday, Maheu said that two suitcases, each containing $50,000 in cash, had been given to Rebozo, Nixon's close friend.

Richard Danner, a Hughes aide who is now general manager of the Hughes-owned Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., gave Rebozo the first suitcase at the Western White House in 1969, Maheu said.

Maheu said he and Danner gave Rebozo the second suitcase in 1970 at Key Biscayne, Fla., where Rebozo has a home.

He said he gave Humphrey $50,000 in cash during the 1968 presidential campaign.

Hughes also acted to give Sen. Robert Kennedy $25,000 that year, but Kennedy was assassinated before the money was delivered, so the cash went to Democratic national committee chairman Larry O'Brien instead, Maheu said.

Maheu said Hughes wanted to "own the president, choose his successor, members of the supreme court, senators, congressmen and politicians at all levels."

Maheu also referred to "a handwritten memorandum from Mr. Hughes wherein Mr. Hughes was asking me to make a million dollar payoff to a president of the United States," the incident took place in 1957, when Lyndon Johnson was president.

PATERSON

Sidney Man Released

A Sidney man, one of three Canadians held by military authorities in Santiago after the Chilean coup has been released to the Canadian embassy.

Capt. and Mrs. William Paterson, 2277 Gall Place, Sidney, received word early today from Ottawa that their 20-year-old son Bill Jr. is now in the hands of Canadian officials in Santiago.

Bill was among the 1,000 people detained for questioning by the new government which seized power Sept. 11.

The other two Canadians who were held also have been released. They are Robert Everton, of Burnaby and Michael Beaubien, of Montreal.

"We heard at 8 a.m. today that Bill had been freed and he has to get out of the country as quickly as possible," Mrs. Paterson said.

A Canadian embassy official in Santiago said the three men were tired and hungry when they arrived at the embassy, but they had not been mistreated.

"We're hoping and praying that Canadian officials are telling the truth when they say our son is all right," Mrs. Paterson said Tuesday afternoon, a short time after learning of her son's detention.

"They have told us that he is all right, that he hasn't been abused and that he is only being detained for interrogation," she said.

He spent almost a year in New Zealand and then went to

Skylab Team Wobbly

Times News Services

The only apparent problem facing the three Skylab astronauts after their record 59 days in space is unsteadiness as a result of their time in weightlessness, according to doctors aboard the recovery ship USS New Orleans.

Alan Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma splashed down in the Pacific about 230 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif., on schedule at 3:20 Tuesday afternoon.

Lousma was the first one out of the command craft, and he had to hold onto the hatch door before walking to a chair set up on a folklift truck. When he walked, he wobbled and he had to be helped into the chair by two space agency doctors.

Carriott came out next, and while he looked a little more chipper than Lousma he wobbled too. Bean was last man out, and like Lousma had to be helped into his chair.

Doctors fully expect the three astronauts to feel badly for at least three days and perhaps as long as a week. They don't expect them to regain all the weight, red blood cells and plasma and muscle tone they've lost for as long as a month.

Double Life for CDC Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corporation will establish offices in Toronto and Vancouver with its top officers attempting to divide their time between both places, corporation president H. A. Hampson said Tuesday.

He said the corporation has taken space in the Marathon Building in downtown Vancouver and will also open an office in Toronto and will close its present Ottawa office.

The two-office set up is apparently designed to go part way to meeting a promise made by Prime Minister Trudeau in November, 1971, that the corporation's headquarters would be moved to Vancouver from Ottawa.

Hampson said in an interview that three corporation officials would spend most of their time in the Vancouver office and another three would work in Toronto with both he and corporation chairman Marshall Crowe attempting to divide their time between the two offices.

"Toronto seemed the logical place for an office, particularly if we are going to be involved in a share issue next year," said Hampson. "A lot of my time will be spent on that project in Toronto."

"A tremendous amount of travelling is involved in this job at present and we don't think of any one place as a permanent office," said Hampson.

Prisoner Tries Soapbox Exit

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli prisoner tried an unusual jailbreak Tuesday. He submitted his name for election to parliament.

A Supreme Court judge told Israel Radio that if elected, the prisoner would automatically be released. But he would not be allowed to campaign personally.

The judge did not identify the would-be politician and it was not known if he had paid the registration fee of $3,783.

out a brief statement and refused to answer any questions.

"The vice-president's letter relates to matters before the courts," the statment said.

"In view of that fact, I, as speaker, will not take any action on the letter at this time."

Agnew backers could circumbent Albert's decision by the drastic method of introducing a resolution to impeach Agnew, thus forcing an inquiry. There was no indication, however, that such a move was being contemplated.

One Rupublican, Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois, did introduce a resolution today calling for creation of a select committee to investigate "whether the house shall undertake impeachment proceedings against the vice-president."

The quick Albert decision came as a surprise. House sources had indicated the leadership would probably mull over the Agnew request until at least next week.

The oil streamed out of a huge gash in the 9,229-ton British freighter Erawan, which was holed amidships by the 8,176-ton Japanese container ship Sun Diamond.

The transport department inquiry, which is expected to continue for several days, is under the chairmanship of Captain Dave Brenner.

No one was injured in the collision.

Des Allard, spokesman for the ministry of transport, said at least 100 people were actively engaged in organizing the oil cleanup operation, including representatives from the Coast Guard Clean Seas Canada Ltd., the federal department of the environment, the cities of Vancouver, West and North Vancouver, the towing companies Seaspan International Ltd. and Gulf of Georgia Towing Co. Ltd. and the anti-pollution group SPEC.

Allard said Clean Seas has been given assurances of unlimited manpower in its fight against the spilled oil.

Much of the oil was contained by booms thrown around the crippled British freighter and across the entrance to Vancouver harbor, but some was carried by swirling tidal waters onto beaches in North and West Vancouver.

Jim Hamilton, West Vancouver municipal engineer, co-ordinated the battle against the oil at the municipality's Ambleside Beach.

He said all the bailed peat moss available in West Vancouver was bought and more ordered. A Delta farmer offered 700 bales of straw.

Hamilton said the main concern was sightseers trampling the oil into the sand before it could be mopped up. When oil started to come ashore, he ordered the area cordoned off.

Manpower was drawn from Capilano College. A College spokesman said some classes were cancelled and about 300 students volunteered. One class which adjourned to the beach was the outdoor recreational management class.

A college film production group also took to the beaches to film the fight. The films will be used in future instructions in environmental and urban problems.

The Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said only one seabird, a duckling covered with oil, was brought to its West Vancouver branch for treatment.

H. O. Buchanan, regional director of the ministry of transport's marine services, said a surface pump worked through the night removing a mixture of oil and water from the Erawan's hold into an oil barge.

He said southeast winds forecast for today should hold the heavier oil where it is and move the lighter oil into the gulf of Georgia for dispersal.

In Ottawa, John Fraser (PC —Vancouver South) said emergency procedures for handling oil spills must be upgraded drastically.

The failure of clean-up crews to put a boom around the spill within minutes demonstrated the inadequacy of existing clean-up equipment and contingency plans, he said.

MLA Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the spill shows a need for a marine traffic control system and a central communications centre to handle future spills.

Williams said all coastal waters should be under control, in the same way as air space around airports.

He said a communications centre would pass word of spills, monitor oil slicks and alert communities likely to be affected so that clean-up operations can be run efficiently.

Premier Barrett told the legislature the provincial government has offered whatever assistance it can in the clean-up efforts.

He said there has been no specific request from Ottawa for provincial co-operation, but that Resources Minister Bob Williams will be monitoring the situation.

During the daily question period, Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said the government is considering taking legal action against those persons responsible for the oil spill to recover the costs of damage to the recreational value of the water involved.

The search for other victims was spurred by reports the injured man had pleaded in the ambulance for workers to rescue his wife, who normally works with him. But she was later found to have been at home at the time of the explosion.

Chief Simons said later all others in the buildings had been accounted for. Two firemen received minor injuries, were treated at hospital and released.

SHOPPING SAVED HER

Mrs. Edith Eastwood, owner of the Little Wonder Confectionary, saved every Wednesday morning to go downtown shopping.

She was returning from downtown by cab today when the taxi man "told me, it's a good thing that I'm not at my shop now."

Mrs. Eastwood said he told her about the gas explosion and fire which levelled her shop, and home behind it, minutes before.

Interviewed at the scene, she said she was in the midst of selling her shop. It was not covered by insurance.

But she was more concerned about her pet dog. Tears in her eyes and carrying recently purchased dog food, she said he had been left in the shop while she was out. There has been no sign of the animal.

out with more to hide than to show," the statement added.

The PQ accused Bourassa of calling an election to hide "the troubling revelations" made recently about links between the Liberal government and the underworld.

The statement said the Liberals have also avoided instituting major reforms in such areas as the financing methods of political parties and a language policy.

Bourassa said in his radio-television announcement his government has fulfilled its mandate "to get the economy moving again, to clean up our public finances, to improve our social climate and to affirm Quebec's role within Canada."

Meanwhile, the Montreal Gazette says Bourassa went against the wishes of four of his senior cabinet ministers when he opted for the election.

The paper says Finance Minister Raymond Garneau, Guy Saint Pierre, minister of industry and commerce, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer and Communications Minister Jean-Paul l'Allier voiced their disagreement to the party caucus at a Sept. 13 meeting called to discuss an election date.

Chile with a New Zealand friend in August, his mother said.

"We don't think that he knew really what was happening when he went to Chile."

"He and his friend had gone to the country to look around and then to climb the Andes Mountains. We had a letter from him Sept. 4 telling us about his plans and then we got a telegram Sept. 6 telling us he was all right and not to worry.

"He had mentioned in an earlier letter we could write to him at the British embassy in Argentina and we did, but when we didn't have a word from him we got worried and contacted the external affairs department in Vancouver."

Mrs. Paterson said she thought there might have been some trouble because the friend Bill was travelling with had the same last name as he did and was also born in Scotland.

"I guess they thought the boys were brothers and that might have caused a problem," she said.

Take the Pledge.

If you're like most of us, saving money doesn't come naturally. Unlike breathing, eating (and spending) you may need some help to get yourself to do it.
Cash-builder is TD's plan to make saving easy. Once you see how it works, we hope you'll put it to work for you.

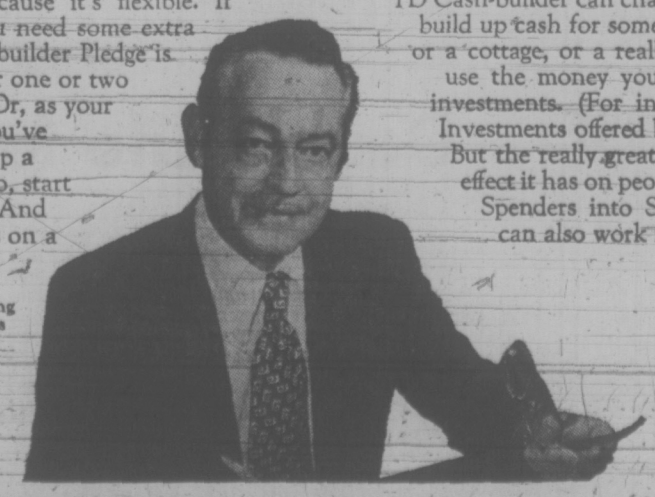
One reason Cash-builder works is it's automatic. You tell us how many dollars you'd like to save on a regular basis; Cash-builder takes it from there. We'll deduct the amount you say from your Personal Chequing Account—once a month, twice a month or whenever—and deposit this into your Premium Savings Account. (If you don't have a Premium Savings Account, we'll be glad to open one for you.)
The working principle here is simple: What you don't see, you're not so likely to spend.

You're not locked in.

Cash-builder also works because it's flexible. If something comes up and you need some extra money, changing your Cash-builder Pledge is easy to do. We can stop it for one or two months, and then restart it. Or, as your situation gets better (when you've paid off that loan or picked up a raise) you can, if you want to, start paying yourself a little more. And while you can't write cheques on a TD Premium Savings Account, you can make cash withdrawals if you need to.



Don Aker,
TD's Supervisor of Marketing for British Columbia, invites you to take the pledge. It's just one of the ways we'll go to work for you.

How to nudge it out of your budget.

To see how much you can promise yourself with comfort have a talk with your TD Manager. Or just call in and pick up one of our Cash-builder forms. It contains a chart to work out your Cash-flow budget: The amount you need for your fixed expenses; and the money left over that's yours to use any way you want. Decide how much of this you would like to put toward savings. Then take the Cash-builder pledge that will put your plan to work.

The end of "easy go".

You work plenty hard for your money. So while it's not "easy come", you may have found it's been all too often "easy go".
TD Cash-builder can change this for you. It can help you build up cash for some of the big things—like a home, or a cottage, or a really great vacation. You can also use the money you save to get in on some good investments. (For instance, the four Term Deposit Investments offered by the TD.)
But the really great thing about Cash-builder is the effect it has on people. We've seen it turn them from Spenders into Savers. If it works for them, it can also work for you.

Barrett 'Cares', Says Newman ... Long Political Life Ahead

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Maclean's editor Peter Newman met Premier Dave Barrett for the first time Tuesday morning, lingered for lunch with him and came away saying Barrett is the most interesting politician in Canada.

He also said that of all the politicians he's met he thinks Barrett is going to last the longest because he knows how to conserve and exercise power.

B.C.'s premier is much less dogmatic in his priorities than any New Democrat he knows, said Newman.

"This guy's involved with issues, not ideologies. That also points to a pretty long political life."

One of Barrett's strengths is not only that he cares but that he appears to care. Prime Minister Trudeau on the other hand is a man without compassion.

Newman said he does not get the impression that Barrett's government is moving to the centre, as parties on either wing tend to when they get in power. Instead, government under Barrett will move with events, concentrating where the action is.

The Trudeau government sees Barrett as a "kook," just as it did Bennett. They are saying, in effect: "There was a kook on the right, now there's a kook on the left."

And what's why Trudeau is in trouble, Newman said. He predicted the Liberals will be ousted in the next federal election and devastated in the West, lucky to hold on to two seats.

Stanfield will end up in power with a minority government, supported by the Socreds in Quebec who will take seats from the Liberals.

Newman, who earned a name as one of the country's most astute political analysts with his books: Renegade in Power; The Diefenbaker Years, and The Distemper of Our Times, said another reason he likes Barrett is the premier shares Newman's nationalism.

No, he said, he's talking about a special kind of nationalism, a determination by Canadians to have their own kind of society, according to their own values rather than imported ones.

That kind of society requires government regulations, not, for example, excluding foreign investment, but telling foreign investors: "If you're going to invest in our country you're going to do so in our best national interests," said Newman.

Newman was in Victoria Tuesday as both editor of Macleans and promoting his latest book, Home Country, People, Places and Power Politics, which in a forward he describes as a chronicle of his own political education and adds:

"And what I've learned is not to believe in magical leaders any more; that character and compassion are more important than ideology; and that even if it's absurd to think you can change things, it's even more absurd to think that it's foolish and unimportant to try."

He and his wife Christina are co-authoring the next book, The Anatomy of Canada, due on the book stands in October of 1975.

It will be a 300,000-word study of contemporary political, economic, social and cultural power structures in Canada and how they are linked.

SAANICH HOMES FLOODED AFTER HYDRANT SMASH

Water from a severed fire hydrant flooded the basements of five Saanich homes Tuesday night as police, fire- and waterworks crews searched desperately for the shut-off valve.

Saanich police said today a car driven by Cheryl Anne West of 1168 High Rock Place, collided with a fire hydrant at the corner of Cowper and Austin.

The car severed the bottom joint of the hydrant and water flooded down Austin Ave., headed for homes in the area.

Waterworks crews were called in to shut off the flow of water, but the valve had apparently been paved over.

The crews finally located and dug up the valve, only to find it was faulty.

By this time, police said, the water had flooded the basements of five homes on the street, and fire crews had to pump the water out.

The waterworks crews finally shut off the water supply to the whole area.

Police said today no damage estimate are available, but are expected to be high.

Faisal Studies Kissinger Plan

LONDON (UPI) — The Times of London said today U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has put forward a Middle East peace plan that has been accepted as a basis for discussion by King Faisal of Saudi Arabia.

The front-page story by Louis Heren, deputy editor of the Times, said the report was based on "reliable reports from the Middle East."

The Times' New York correspondent quoted state department spokesman Robert McCloskey as denying the report.

The plan, according to the Times, contained these points:

—Israel to make partial withdrawal from the Suez Canal, giving up control of both banks to Egypt.

—Sharm-El-Sheik to be ruled jointly by Egypt and Israel under a condominium plan.

—An area of the Sinai Peninsula, to be determined, also to be a condominium.

—Jerusalem to remain part of Israel but Christian and Moslem holy places and privileges to be administered and protected by the Vatican and Jordan, respectively.

—The west bank to be returned to Jordan but new Israeli settlements to remain.

The Times said it was understood the plan was discussed at the recent summit meeting of Egypt, Syria and Jordan.

"It's attraction, at least for King Faisal, is that the reputation and influence of Dr. Kissinger are such that the Israeli government will be required to negotiate," the Times said.

Rangers Carry Mace

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Washington State park rangers will be allowed to carry and use chemical mace under a new official policy, a parks and recreation commission official confirmed Tuesday.

"We're talking about a psychological defence — we're talking in terms of a deterrent," said assistant director Byron Haley. "Mace is to be used only after all efforts that can be used to subdue a violent person have failed."

Although some rangers have used chemical mace in isolated instances, all use now will come under a statewide, "official, agencywide" policy. Haley said. Use of the chemical weapon has been researched "and we are ready to adopt it as a program," he said.

The department has ordered enough mace for all park rangers, but use will be authorized only to individual rangers who go through special training on the use of the chemical, he said.

HOUSE RUINS YIELD BILLS WORTH $1,260

VANDERHOOF (CP) — Four Vanderhoof boys have started what could become a year-long wait to see if they'll be able to keep $1,260 in banknotes they found on Saturday.

John Thiessen, Danny Weib, Malcolm Evans and Todd Millard, all aged 9 or 10, found the bills in the ruins of a demolished house.

A police spokesman said the house was many years old, but the money was of recent issue. He said the bills would be returned to the boys if the owner is not found within a year.

The Skeleton Might Get Fat

Much to their chagrin, many governments have found that the best theoretical legislation may go astray in practice. But the provincial government in its guaranteed farm income insurance plan appears to be legislating before it has filled in all the theory. The bill describes a farm income plan in vague terms as anything "that provides in any way for the paying of moneys to, or guaranteeing, or assuring of income for, such farmers ..." as the cabinet may designate.

For example if a wheat farmer or a cherry grower found his annual return falling below a certain level set by the insurance scheme the farmer or cherry grower would likely be paid the difference in a lump sum. But if a farmer who was participating in the scheme received a higher price for his product than the guaranteed level set by the insurance program he would be required to pay a portion of the extra profit back into the fund.

With such a system of subsidies it will be interesting to see how many farmers enter into the plan. The Peace River wheat farmer with 5,000 acres of wheat currently worth $5 per bushel will certainly shun any insurance scheme in which he has to turn back some of his hard-earned profit into the fund. Conversely, the marginal fruit farmers of the interior who claim they can't make production costs will be first in line for any benefits. Does the scheme mean that government will ultimately subsidize all the province's inefficient farmers?

Agricultural Minister David Stupich said the minimum price level will be negotiated between government and the specific farm industry and some "seed" money — the minister didn't specify how much — will be provided by the provincial government. As tabled in the House the legislation is a mere skeleton.

What will the minimum levels be for the scores of agricultural products, and how much public money will be funnelled into the scheme? Presumably the NDP cabinet will decide all these matters in due time. Meanwhile, the opposition is being asked to give the government carte blanche in its insurance program. No government should get that kind of credit rating without answering some pointed questions.

"... believe me, sir ... the whole gang is working feverishly to get you a better spoon ..."

Some Gratitude Is in Order

The successful splashdown of the three Skylab astronauts despite problems with their Apollo space vehicle has concluded a phase of one of the most ambitious space projects in the United States program. It is a time for congratulations to all who participated.

Although there are many reasons and arguments why the cause of pure science should be advanced by moon flights and other space activities, the Skylab program, of which this was the second adventure, has changed the accent on the man-in-space concept. The daily messages from the flying laboratory told of almost unbelievble forward steps in man's observation of the planet and of the deep space around it.

Study of weather formations around the globe, of mapping of earth and sea in incredible detail from so great a height, experiments in the ability of the human body to stand weightlessness and artificial living conditions, increased knowledge of the sun and sunspots which exert such an influence on the earth, observations of more distant stars and other phenomena in space, and many down-to-earth surveys which cannot be carried out on the surface with such speed and accuracy — these and many other wonders have presented earth-bound scientists with a wealth of information that will take many months to analyse.

The benefits to farmers, developers of natural resources, foresters, astronomers and all mankind will be realized as this information is digested and still more is received from later flights. Man is now entering the era of tangible returns from the vast investments involved in space exploration. Canada and other countries will be the beneficiaries of much of what United States adventurers and scientists learn from the Skylab studies. In that sense their successes are our successes. Their exploits belong to mankind.

Time for Negotiations

It is more than three weeks since a protest group of young Indians built their illegal fishing weir on the Cowichan River. Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said he would not negotiate with the Indians until they removed the weir, which is illegal under section 13 of the Federal Fisheries Act as well as being against B.C. fishing laws.

To date federal fisheries officials have not intervened, in order to avoid incidents. But the natives have made their point, and even if they contest the validity of the weir laws, the statutes exist and should be obeyed. By removing the weir they could institute negotiations with the federal fisheries minister, who should listen to their plight with a sympathetic ear.

Under current regulations the Indians say they cannot catch enough fish to feed their families. They want the right to catch fish by any means, including weirs, providing there is a sufficient escapement to ensure future runs. Observers of the Cowichan weir say the natives have been careful to allow some fish to pass. In an age when governments are handing out subsidies to citizens of every age group, it is curious that the Indians, who ask only to help themselves, should be prevented from exercising traditional fishing rights and methods as long as they agree to observe basic conservation practices.

In the present stand-off nothing is being accomplished. The government has promised to talk if the Indians remove the weir. A little good faith on both sides might resolve the issue without further recriminations.

Liking for Political Cannibalism

TORONTO — As long as there are "Liberals" around, the Ontario Liberal Party will never lack for trouble. Like the Democrats in the United States, Ontario Liberals have a liking for political cannibalism; they just love to destroy themselves.

Right now they are having an orgy of it. Liberal leader Robert Nixon has asked his chief lieutenant, Vernon Singer, to resign as deputy leader. Mr. Singer is suing his colleague and MPP for Owen Sound, Eddie Sargent, for defamation of character. Mr. Sargent is busy making the term "Liberal" a synonym for political nincompoop. Donald Deacon, the MPP for York Centre, is telling anyone who will listen that his good friend Bob Nixon is a loser.

And the "Hydrogate" affair, the best issue against the Conservatives to come along in many a year, has suddenly become, of all things, a Liberal liability.

All this has happened because Mr. Nixon decided in August to reverse his earlier decision to resign the party leadership. The reversal was in response partly to widespread party pressure and partly to much improved electoral prospects in 1975, and it should have reduced the leadership convention in October (mandatory under the party's constitution) to a pro forma procedure, in which the only problem before the party would be to get through it with a certain amount of class and thereby demonstrate that the Liberals are a cohesive, responsible alternative to the skidding Conservatives.

Opened Attack

Mr. Deacon's determination to contest the leadership, despite Mr. Nixon's decision to carry on, was not considered antagonistic to this scenario because Mr. Deacon is a hard-working, soft-spoken Liberal with a large talent for putting an audience to sleep. Perhaps to compensate for this image, however, Mr. Deacon opened up with an aggressive attack on Mr. Nixon's leadership, instead of attacking the Conservatives.

This might be a plausible strategy if Mr. Nixon really were an ineffective leader and Mr. Deacon had a real chance of winning the convention, but such is not the case. All Mr. Deacon is going to do is to remind the voters that the Liberals still appear to have a leadership problem, which might have been true a few years ago but is hardly so today.

Mr. Sargent's entry into the race was also an event which should have been manageable. Eddie Sargent is a character, a flamboyant personality whom no one takes too seriously. His program included, for example, the abolition of the provincial income tax — or at least it did until he discovered, at a press conference, that this was not the small money raiser he thought it to be but the largest single source of provincial revenue. Eddie will admit, if pushed, that his chances of winning the leadership are slim and that he is really in the race to get the Liberal Party "jumping".

Unfortunately, in his zeal for headlines, Mr. Sargent also attacked the party leadership, centring upon a $25,000 retainer which Mr. Singer, a lawyer in private life, has from developer Gerhard Moog, the president of Canada Square Corporation and the friend of Premier William Davis who was awarded a large contract to build a new head office for Ontario Hydro.

ROBERT NIXON
... bickering in the party

In characteristic language, Mr. Sargent called this "hush money" and a "cosy arrangement" which put the Liberals "in the same bag with Davis". He said Mr. Singer should return the money and Mr. Nixon is to be criticized for remaining silent even though he knew about the Singer-Moog arrangement.

There is in fact nothing sinister about the $25,000 however embarrassing it may appear. It was Mr. Nixon who raised the Hydro contract as a political issue in the Legislature, and he did so after Mr. Singer had told him and the Liberal caucus (which Mr. Sargent rarely attends) that he did legal work for Mr. Moog. None of this, however, involved the Hydro project or other government work and there was nothing secret about it, since Mr. Singer had appeared on behalf of Mr. Moog before various municipal authorities concerning another development.

In any event, it certainly had no silencing effect on the Liberal pursuit of the Hydro matter, which became the subject of a most intensive five month's legislative investigation and has done the Conservatives, and Premier Davis personally, no good at all. Both Mr. Singer and Mr. Nixon testified at the hearings and explained the $25,000 retainer to everyone's satisfaction — except possibly Mr. Moog's, about whom evidence was adduced that he certainly thought it was a good political idea to have Mr. Singer involved.

Defamation Suit

Instead of explaining the facts again and dismissing Mr. Sargent as the phenomenon he is, however, Mr. Singer announced suit for defamation. This of course will appear to many as an attempt to cut off further public discussion, which is hardly the politically smart thing to do. The only rational explanation for Mr. Singer's decision, considering that he is an astute politician, is that he has been hoping for federal judicial appointment and it is necessary to clear his reputation in a way that the legal world will understand.

But Mr. Nixon was so upset at the sight of one Liberal suing another for slander, and having Mr. Sargent's nonsense promoted to the front page, that he said "yes" on the spot when Mr. Singer offered to resign as deputy leader if Mr. Nixon regarded the lawsuit as an "embarrassment" to him or the party. Mr. Sargent's reaction was that the lawsuit "nullified" further comment.

And of course no Ontario Liberal leadership race would be complete without one or two federal cabinet ministers getting ideas. The provincial Liberals need federal intervention as much as they need Eddie Sargent: indeed, their essential problem has been for years to stake out an independent provincial identity, free of federal influence and association. But the call of duty is heard by many and at this writing both Labor Minister John Munro and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, the Conservatives should be so lucky, are weighing where their responsibility really lies.

"Time," sighed a Liberal aide at Queen's Park, "will no doubt heal all. Oh, for the healing power of time."

WILLIAM R. FRYE

Are the Intentions Honest?

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — In the past, when winds from Moscow have blown cold, the West has quickly shelved or healed its differences. No medicine for western ills has ever been so effective as a new and visible challenge from the East.

This week, the world will begin to find out whether the axiom still holds true.

Winds from Moscow have indeed been chilly, if not cold, in recent weeks. The Kremlin still wants detente with the West, but has shown itself unwilling to do the difficult things that would make detente real.

Indeed, Soviet Party Boss Leonid Brezhnev is widely quoted as having told East European leaders rapprochement with the West is a temporary tactic to buy time while the Soviet achieves decisive military supremacy.

Alerted to Danger

It should therefore follow that westerners, alerted to the danger of a trap, will close ranks and deal co-operatively with the challenge.

There are plenty of differences to heal. They have sprung up abundantly in the rich soil of detente.

They include below-the-belt trading practices; dirty tricks against the dollar, and an almost-universal desire to let someone else — anyone else — pay for defending western Europe.

Moreover there is fundamental disagreement over whether it is desirable at all to seek closer relations with the Soviet Union when the effort could simply produce weakness, dissension and instability in the West — as, indeed, it has begun to do.

And there is disagreement over where Western Europe should be heading: Whether toward political confederation, the long-dreamed-of United States of (Western) Europe, or toward an era of co-operation embracing Eastern Europe as well — an objective inconsistent with political unity in the West.

All these differences need to be hammered out, and Dr. Henry Kissinger, in his earlier incarnation as presidential adviser, urged Europe last April to turn its attention to the challenge.

Now, belatedly, Europe has formulated an answer, and Kissinger is to sit down here in New York this week to discuss it with K. B. Andersen, the Danish Foreign Minister.

LEONID BREZHNEV
... temporary tactic

Out of these talks will emerge the answer to whether recent growls from the Russian bear will succeed in driving the West back together. "West-West" negotiations often are difficult, and the Kremlin has not yet behaved badly enough to give them real urgency.

Meanwhile there will be an excellent opportunity to test Russia's true intentions. It will be afforded by the 35-nation Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, which resumed in Geneva last week.

If the Kremlin is simply manoeuvring to weaken and divide the Atlantic alliance, while seeking to solidify and render permanent its control over Eastern Europe, that fact will become apparent. Western negotiators at Geneva have devised ways to find out.

But if the Soviet Union is genuinely ready to build a new Europe, its coldness of late having simply been hard-bargaining tactics, that too will become clear.

And the West will respond accordingly. Westerners will be happy to construct a more nearly homogeneous Europe in which cold-war barriers are swept away and people are free to travel, do business, exchange ideas and come to know one another across what was once an Iron Curtain.

Expanded Trade

In such a Europe, trading opportunities would be so greatly expanded that much western in-fighting would be redundant, and the costs of defence so much less burdensome that disputes over its sharing would be all but obsolete. Many "West-West" differences would be superseded.

If, however, Moscow still clings to the idea that its system and its alliances can remain tightly under control while western unity comes unstuck in an atmosphere of superficial detente, President Nixon may have to go to Europe to dispel this illusion — and West Europeans are likely to make him welcome.

The Soviet Union cannot have its detente and exploit it too. This is the message which the Kissinger-Andersen meeting this week will be designed to convey.

Not Marxist

There is a risk of offending the religious precepts of the Times, its columnists and many of its readers, in relation to the nature of current world society. But it seems necessary to point out that in the instance of Salvadore Allende and the country of Chile, Allende never was a Marxist. He and his party did not have a Marxist understanding of society—nor therefore the concept of the solution to the problems afflicting the bottom majority; the problems that arise out of this society.

It has been pointed out in Times articles that Allende's party carried out reforms in greater measure, and faster—reforms that the Christian Democrat Party that preceded Allende had already started. Yet the Christian Democrats were not generally regarded as being Marxist. So why call Allende a Marxist for merely expanding upon what non-Marxists were doing, unless one wants to subscribe to the theory that a larger quantity of something changes its nature.

Like a gallon container with a quart of water in it. Add three more quarts of water and presto, we have a gallon of whiskey! This theory would never succeed in a distillery. It won't work to solve the political problems of the useful section of society either.

The result of Marx's lifetime analysis of capitalism and of those who worked with him was the advocacy of a classless, state-less, money-less, wage-less, profit-less world of common ownership and democratic control of the means of production and distribution. To be based upon free access and voluntary effort—itself motivated by enlightened self-interest and social responsibility.

Allende's coalition in Chile on the other hand, was preoccupied with serving sections of the Chilean owning class to foreign capital, and in assisting in bringing Chile completely out of semi-feudalism into modern capitalism. (Improving education, incomes, and housing for the producers is good business for the owning class that the producers produce for).

The democratic capitalism of pre-coup Chile was a good thing in relation to the rest of South America, because without the universal franchise the afflicted majority could never vote for a real Marxist (basic) change. But civil rights, as necessary as they are, are not enough without the understanding of the cause of social problems. The Marxist-Socialist euphemism in Chile was a glamorous cover-up and vote-getter, but was no more capable of solving workers' problems than the NDP or "Communist" party is in Canada. — J. G. Jenkins, 959 Darwin Ave.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of September 26, 1913

Whaling off the Queen Charlotte Islands is practically over for this year, and several of the little steamers which operated out of Naden and Rose Harbor stations in pursuit of the big game have returned to port. The Naden Harbor station has shut down for the winter, and it will not be long before all the whalers from Rose Harbor are back in port. The Sechart and Kyuquot stations on the west coast of Vancouver Island generally continue operations longer than the northern stations as they are favored with better weather. The heavy storms of the past few weeks in Hecate strait, Dixon's entrance and the Pacific Ocean and the scarcity of whales have caused the whalers to run for their home port.

Each age has its visions of millennium and the grand delusion of our century is that socialism and democracy can lie down together like lion and lamb. An instant legend is springing to life around the murder-suicide of Salvador Allende and democratic socialism has found another martyr.

Allende's failure in Chile matches Dubcek's in Czechoslovakia. In neither hemisphere nor sphere of influence, it seems, can democracy and socialism be combined. The democratization of a Socialist dictatorship and the socialization of a democracy collide with the same deficiencies of human nature. The final means of extinction were different but the ends were much the same in Chile and Czechoslovakia.

The post mortem will need to analyse three different sets of facts. One is that Allende was a man of doubtful ability for the task of establishing a new kind of socialism by constitutional means in a democracy. Another is the gross interferences which his country suffered from the outside, notably from United States corporations and their agent the U.S. government. The third is that although a Marxist, and the first to be elected head of government in the western world, Allende belonged also in the tradition of Latin-American nationalism.

Allende was an opposition politician who took a plurality of only 36 per cent of the popular vote in the 1970 elections as a mandate to press through a sweepingly ideological program of change. He forgot that in a democracy a leader must provide bread today as well as jam tomorrow. One lesson of the experience, relevant beyond the special conditions in Chile, is that democracy is inflationary and popular socialist democracy is absolutely inflationary.

Allende inherited a mess but he turned it into a worse one. He provoked a middle-class counter-revolution. He was brought down by powerful interests and the guns of the military but also by the pots and pans of the housewives and the strikes of the shopkeepers. In a consumer society the producer alone cannot rule save by dictatorship of the proletariat.

However, the world gave him little chance. The experiment throws new doubt on the feasibility of democratic socialism in one country. Having failed to prevent his election, and having failed to provoke a military coup to prevent his assuming office, American corporations led by the International Telephone and Telegraph Company and aided and abetted by the Nixon administration, set out to destroy Allende by economic means. The "Anderson Papers" document the calculated steps taken to create a financial crisis. What happened in the end was very close to what was planned in 1970.

"A more realistic hope among those who want to block Allende," the ITT man reported in September of that year, "is that a swiftly deteriorating economy (bank runs, plant bankruptcies, etc.) will touch off a wave of violence resulting in a military coup." Another ITT report said: "Undercover efforts are being made to bring about the bankruptcy of one of two of the major savings and loans associations. This is expected to trigger a run on banks and the closure of some factories resulting in more unemployment . . . massive unemployment and unrest might produce enough violence to force the military to move."

The U.S. government joined in these efforts, although cautiously, by cutting off economic assistance to Chile and using its dominant influence in the international development banks to block loans to Allende.

At the same time it continued to pour in military assistance and maintain close links with the Chilean armed forces. In an off-the-record press briefing in September, 1970, Dr. Henry Kissinger told reporters: "I don't think we should delude ourselves that an Allende takeover in Chile would not present massive problems for us, and for forces in Latin America, and indeed to the whole Western Hemisphere."

The Nixon administration was a "business administration," Secretary of State William Rogers in October, 1971, told a private meeting of corporation bosses with investments to protect in Chile; its mission was to protect business.

We do not know what role, if any, the U.S. played in engineering the eventual coup against Allende but there was barely need for cloak or dagger. The "low-profile" policy of economic subversion of his regime was working according to plan.

Allende, although a martyr, is not another Che. He was either a second Castro or the Tito of Latin American socialism. Nationalization was already under way during the rule of President Eduardo Frei, the respectable liberal protege of the Kennedy and Johnson administration. The State Department's candidate for president in 1970, Mr. Radomiro Tomic, was scarcely less radical than Allende. Military dictatorships in Peru and Bolivia have adopted nationalstic policies similar to Allende's.

As the U.S. saw it (the Kissinger briefing makes that clear and the theme runs through the ITT papers) Chile was a South American domino. In the words of the Standard Oil Company, Allende's domestic policies were tantamount to "economic aggression" against the U.S. The Allende story is not only one of failure of a novel ideological experiment in the remoteness of a peculiar country, but a chapter in the conflict between Latin American nationalism and American hegemony.

The Children's Hour And Assorted Killings

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

Channel 7 Children's Hour at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 17, 1973, deals with selling women into prostitution. There is gunfire enough for all. Two women are shot and three or perhaps more of the men.

The sponsors of this family living room entertainment are the Geritol corporation, Macdonald's Hamburgers, Zenith TV, Alka 2, Anacin and Canada Dry Ginger Ale.

So, kids, on with the show.

As you notice, there is hardly any killing for the first several minutes. The story begins with an explanation of how Indians in the Western United States would capture white women and sell them as slaves in Mexico.

As it turns out, no Indians are involved in the kidnapping of these women and we never see any Mexicans buying any women but you'll remember, won't you, how bad the Mexicans and Indians might have been if we'd seen them instead?

Gunned Down

The Geritol and Macdonald's Hamburger sponsors have the first killing in their section of the show at approximately 8:07. One of the ladies who has been kidnapped, a Mrs. McLeod, is roughed up by one of the men who then murders her. Mrs. McLeod's little daughter is watching all this. I guess you can't be too young to understand how that little girl feels, can you?

One minute later two more men are gunned down and two minutes after that another man is killed. Just who they are or why they are shot is a little hard to understand. The main thing is there's lots of bang bang and suffering before we have a station break for our first sponsors, Macdonald's Hamburgers and Geritol.

Now we're in the second quarter. We learn that there are women captives and they are to be taken to Chihuahua, Mexico, where they will be sold.

One of the women is a young girl who is so terrified by all the brutality that she can't eat her meals. She talks with one of the young men who captured her. He explains to her that she's going to be sold and, judging by his sister's experience, she won't be worth looking at in a few years time.

The young man is a pretty average hero for this type of show. He has, as he boasts, seen killing, scalping, and folks treated like animals "but I got used to it, like I did corn whisky."

Selling Women

Now it's time for a message from other sponsors. Zenith TV, Alka 2 for indigestion and an advertisement for another, upcoming, Channel 7 show which is about a crazy killer, we are told.

In the third quarter the boy says he has lost his taste for selling women into prostitution. The little blonde he would like to buy and set free, sort of. As for the others, he favors selling them and taking the profits to go on a holiday with Fitz.

And now our other hosts in our living room — Alka Seltzer and some chocolate bars named Almond Jay.

In the show's last quarter, the boy and the girl try to run away together. The killings now come rather quickly and you have to watch carefully if you want to keep score.

Stab in Back

Then the boy and girl hide while a U.S. marshal rides near. The girl wants to give herself up to the marshal. The boy points a pistol at her and that stops her noise for a moment.

The girl then steals the boy's knife and stabs him in the back. While he keeps grinding his teeth in paln, she taunts him.

Girl runs to marshal.

Boy shoots and kills girl.

Marshal walks up to boy.

Boy dies without any more shooting.

News Coverage by U.S. 'Distorted'

By JAMES TAYLOR

(Taylor is managing editor of the United Church Observer. He wrote this article for the Toronto Star.)

Socialism is accepted in the Canadian political system. Three of our provinces have Socialist governments.

But socialism is not yet accepted in the United States. That is why Canadian readers can rarely find in their newspapers information about Socialist governments elsewhere that is not distorted or misleading. The Canadian reader has become a victim of U.S. paranoia about socialism.

Nowhere has this distortion been more blatant than in stories about Chile, that long, narrow country at the bottom of South America that elected a Socialist government, headed by a president who was an avowed Marxist, Salvador Allende.

The recent coup that resulted in Allende's suicide was preceded by a transportation strike that brought the country to the verge of civil war. The implication was that this was a revolt against the president by the very people who elected him, the working classes.

But this was not a "truckers' strike." It was a truck-owners' strike. It had little support from unions, workers, or peasants. It was supported by doctors, lawyers, and engineers, and by store owners, not employees, who closed stores for 48 hours. Instead of being a revolt by the masses, it turns out to be a sabotaging action by the members of the former privileged classes, those who had beneftied at the expense of the poor under the previous conservative governments.

That hasn't been said.

Canadian newspapers do not have thier own permanent correspondents in Chile. As a result, they have become dependent on American news sources. (Merely having a "Latin American correspondent" is not enough — the information about Chile available in Brazil, Argentina, or Peru may be even more distorted than that available in North America. I was in Peru last March, when Peruvian papers reported the results of Chile's mid-term elections. They ignored Allende's unprecedented increase in popular vote, and interpreted his failure to win a clear majority as a triumph for Eduardo Frei's increasingly right-wing Christian Democratic party.)

The continuing distortion of U.S. news coverage of Chile was studied last year by Dr. John C. Pollock, sociologist and political scientist at Rutgers University, New Jersey. He examined all reports about Chile carried over two years in six of the "best" U.S. papers: the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Wall St. Journal, the Los Angeles Times and the Christian Science Monitor. His conclusion: "The American public has been fed a steady diet of homogenized information which is uniformly prejudiced against the government of President Salvador Allende."

His contention is that U.S. media treat Chile as a battleground between Marxism and democracy, that they portrayed Allende as a puppet on a Communist string who was juggling Chile's economy into chaos for the sake of Socialist ideals, while they ignore the disruptive influence of U.S. monetary and trade pressures and the destructive actions of Chile's right-wing groups.

Allende's Socialist government was consistently portrayed as stifling freedom of the press. Any impartial visitor to Chile soon discovered the opposite. There was probably no other country in the world, and certainly no other in Latin America, where the press had such freedom to attack the government. Almost all the country's radio stations, and a majority of the newspapers, were openly anti-government. Unfortunately, these papers were also the ones with the best contacts with North America. The publisher of El Mercurio, Santiago's dominant daily, is a vice-president of Pepsi Cola. And it was these papers' version of the news that most readily reached North American readers.

So, on June 23, the New York Times ran a headline: "Court in Chile shuts paper over anti-Allende ad." Clearly implied is that Chilean courts had become tools of the government against any political opposition. What the story did not bother saying was that the ad advocated open disobedience, violence, and insurrection — an advertisement that would have been intolerable to the U.S. government, had any American editor accepted it. The story also left the impression that the closure of the newspaper was permanent. It was, in fact, for one day.

Presumably, we shall read, later this year, that agricultural production declined in Chile. It will be partly blamed on poor weather, partly on the government's policies of breaking up large private landholdings, and of encouraging peasants to "occupy" unproductive private property.

There will be little mention of a strike last October by owners and distributors that withheld seeds and fertilizer at planting time. There will be no mention of landowners shooting peasants who have occupied land (even after legal expropriation proceedings have been completed), nor that no murder charges have been laid against any of these shooters, nor how such shootings affect the willingness of peasant farmers to stand in the middle of a field working their land.

Whether the policies of the Allende government were right or wrong, Chile was making a valiant effort to be independent, economically, politically, and culturally. The aims were similar to Canada's, but Chile started with immense disadvantages in size and wealth compared to Canada.

Whether the Chilean experiment will continue, and in what form, is open to question today. But whatever the future holds, the Canadian media can help balance the news they give their readers by seeking continuing contacts on both sides of the controversies.

THE TITLE TRAP

THE SUN
An Editorial

The critics who affect to be "thunderstruck" by the lavish renovations to the offices of NDP cabinet ministers betray an ignorance of the power of words.

When the welfare ministry was called the welfare ministry, for example, threadbare was fitting.

When the welfare ministry became the ministry of rehabilitation and social improvement, something had to be done about those spittoons.

When the ministry of rehabilitation and social improvement became the ministry of human resources, well, what else but a suite framed in "dark, rich, wooden panelling, new "padded chairs and couch," a new lighting system, and a "desk that would easily sleep three?"

To condemn Norm Levi for "living high on the hog" and "wasteful excess" is to misunderstand his predicament. If he were Welfare Minister Levi a little tasteful shabbiness would be apropos. As Human Resources Minister Levi, he deserves nothing but the best. And as a man trapped by his title, he is more to be pitied than scorned. Ask any king.

Uncle Sam Will Get You

RUSSELL BAKER

Here is an alarming little news story. It is about eight men who went to Florida in 1972 with a mind to stage some sort of protest against the Vietnam war.

It was not an illogical place for protest. Both Democrats and Republicans held their conventions that summer in Miami Beach, largely because Miami Beach is an artificial city cut off from the world by a natural moat, and this moat mentality arose mainly from a sense among men who ran the country that they had behaved so badly about the war that sensible persons might be tempted to make an embarrassing scene about it.

Politicians dislike scenes in election years. They want to hear their excellence praised before the multitude, and this was the game plan in Miami Beach, at least for the Republicans. From inside the moat they filled the television screens of six continents with self-praise of a density and volume that would have made a Pharoah blush.

All that is politics, and perfectly all right, the politician's trade being, on occasion, to fool all of the people some of the time, but only for their own good, mind you, only for their own good. The eight men in this alarming news story were in politics, too, the politician's trade being, on other occasions, to make life embarrassing for politicians they disagree with.

Very quickly, however, they ceased being in politics and became in jail. The Justice Department had them indicted on charges of conspiring to do violence within the moat, which they never reached, of course, on account of their major problem with the law.

They were tried this summer in Gainesville. After deliberating briefly, a jury found them not guilty. This was 14 months after their arrest and five weeks of trial.

Lovers of American law customarily give themselves airs at this stage of this repetitious story, for, they say, it shows that the American legal system manages finally to serve justice. And yet, very little justice was done in this case, or in many others like it which have ended in acquitals for persons charged with political crimes in the past decade.

This alarming little news story, for example. It states that the eight men who wanted to protest the war at Miami Beach have bills of about $150,000 as a result. Being tried by Uncle Sam is an expensive luxury.

In fact, Uncle Sam is something like the man in the cigar commercial who keeps threatening that he is going to get you. When Uncle Sam sets out to get you, he is going to get you. He doesn't know how. Maybe by putting you in prison, maybe by letting you escape prison and merely driving you into bankruptcy. But he is going to get you.

The financial drain of being tried by the government is only part of the grand disaster. What of the fact that the eight men were deprived of their right to make their protest?

How about being required to spend 14 months of their lives preoccupied with lawyers and absorbed with the threat of imprisonment? Who among us can afford to be distracted from his normal work for more than a year while the government attempts to pull us away?

Whether defendants in such cases are convicted or not probably makes small difference to the government. The punishment for being indicted is severe enough to make a man swear off disagreements with the reigning politicians for the rest of his life, which is really what governments want.

The Nixon Administration's use of these indictments to preoccupy, harass and bankrupt opponents of the Vietnam war has been part of a general policy of injustice pursued by the Justice Department since the early 1960s to compel people to quit complaining about Vietnam and love the war.

The remedy seems obvious enough. If the justice department is going to function as an Injustice Department, then the government ought to provide a comparable source of wealth and power for the aid of persons whom the government sets out to get.

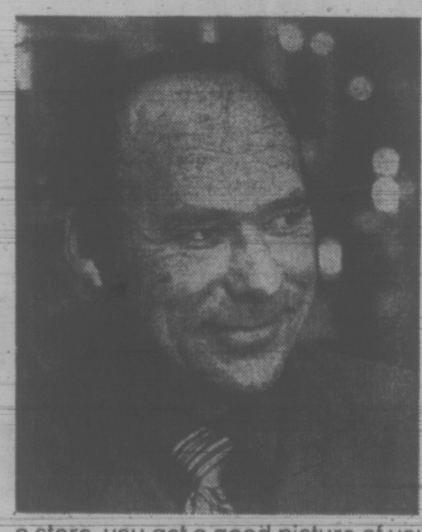
The legal costs of being a defendant ought to be paid in full by the government if it fails to get you. Why should an innocent person have to go into bankruptcy because John Mitchell doesn't like his looks? Travel costs should be paid, too. Hotel bills and bail fees, compensation for time missed from the job, and compensatory damages for worry and fretting and time lost from active opposition to the government.

Why not, in fact, permit the bringing of extremely expensive, time-consuming indictments against any attorney-general who has you indicted for political crime and can't make it stick? With a clear understanding, of course, that he has to pay all his legal costs out of his own bank balance, even if a jury clears him.

If the government can't get you fair and square, it ought to have to think twice before it tries.

New York Times

"Okay, Chuck Delainey, what do you think about mining?"



"In the day-to-day business of running a store, you get a good picture of your town's economic life," says Chuck Delainey, hardware merchant. "Well, it's pretty obvious what happened when a mine was developed near our town. The figures for most businesses improved; rail and truck freight were up and they built quite a few homes for mine employees. Now all that activity is good news for a town like ours, and as far as I'm concerned, that's just what the mine is — good news for myself and my employees."

Pulp, Paper Index At Eight-Yr. High

The pulp and paper industry is performing strongly on the stock market this week, one of the few sectors of the economy continuing to benefit from inflation.

The paper and forest index on the Toronto Stock Exchange has risen higher than at any time since April, 1965, and an all-time record seems likely this year.

The index consists of nine major companies operating in Canada. Share values of the nine firms have increased 42 per cent so far this year.

Among leaders in the advance is MacMillan Bloedel which closed at $37 in Tuesday trading. The shares have risen $7 since August.

Others recording high prices for the year are Domtar, Great Lakes Paper, Anglo-Canadian, Abitibi, Consolidated Bathurst and Canadian Cellulose.

The last company is the recent acquisition by the British Columbia government. Critics of the government have been shaking their heads at the "dumb luck" of the New Democrats for getting into the pulp and paper industry at a time of sensational market conditions after a three-year depression in the industry.

Besides Canadian Cellulose at Prince Rupert, the government has a marginal pulp operation at Ocean Falls that may turn a profit because of high prices for the product.

The question industry leaders ask is how the government will respond when prices fall at the end of the cycle and the profits disappear.

Canadian Cellulose closed at 8.25 on Tuesday, up .38 with over 32,000 shares trading hands.

The pulp and paper industry is thriving because of high demand, high prices and the ability to pass increased costs along to purchasers.

In other sectors, inflation simply means higher costs and a greater squeeze on profits.

With the strength of the pulp and paper issues, the Toronto industrial index is the highest in two months at 222.30 Tuesday afternoon.

Besides the pulp issues, the market is enjoying a mild—although not necessarily sustained — recovery with the growing feeling that interest rates are nearing a peak.

Rising prices for Canadian bonds add confidence that interest rates are levelling off.

However the federal government is faced with the dilemma of whether to let interest rates fall and thus reduce the cost of money, and therefore inflation or to keep interest rates high and cool off inflation by keeping the demand for money under check.

In any case, the government is most likely to follow the lead of the U.S., where the prime interest rate is believed to have peaked at the all-time record 10 per cent.

Food Exporters Need Help, Advice

NIPAWIN, Sask. (CP) — Food producers and small manufacturers dealing with the Japanese need government help, says Dr. Don Peer, a honey producer.

Dr. Peer, a bee specialist, says the industry and commerce department constantly encourages honey producers and others to export but when it comes down to the final details of a contract, the small exporter is on his own determining exchange rates and shipping arrangements.

He said one group of honey producers in this area 70 miles east of Prince Albert combined to ship honey to Japan. But, because they were not aware of all the details involved, the venture into the export market cost them $11,000.

"When you're dealing with a Japanese trading company, you are dealing with a tremendous institution with huge resources and their representatives are out to get the best possible deal," Dr. Peer said.

This is to the credit of the Japanese but there have been times when Saskatchewan honey sold to Japan at 14½ cents a pound at a time when Canadian honey was being sold in Japanese stores at $1.05 a pound.

Obviously, Canadian producers could have made a better deal but they lacked the information necessary to barter properly.

Totem For Twin

Preliminary arrangements for the exchange of gifts with Napier, Victoria's twin city in New Zealand, were discussed Tuesday when Mayor Peter Pollen received an informal visit from the Canadian High Commissioner to New Zealand, John Dougan.

Dougan told Pollen that Mayor Peter Tait of Napier and fellow city councillors are enthusiastically planning the gift ceremonies to cement the twinning relationship established last year, and have already discussed commissioning a local Maori tribe to undertake the work.

Such carvings are "almost priceless," he said, and Napier was hoping Victoria might reciprocate with a totem pole about seven or eight feet high.

Bawlf Lone Opponent to $10M Scheme

A proposed $10 million development for downtown Victoria was given cautious approval in principle by city council Tuesday, despite a barrage of criticism by one alderman and his efforts to have substantial changes made.

Ald. Sam Bawlf was the only council member to express opposition to the design proposal submitted by a firm of Vancouver developers for the Nordal Mall, a hotel and retail project on the block bounded by Government, Courtney, Wharf and Broughton.

In the often heated debate at council's weekly caucus session, he warned repeatedly that the eight-storey hotel component of the complex would create an ugly "massing" effect detrimental to the skyline around the Inner Harbor.

Bawlf said although the hotel tower was designed in tiered, stepped-back style, its 250-foot-long bulk stretched east to west along the Broughton frontage would mar the vistas from the Legislative Buildings area and down Government.

He said the hotel would be "a block-long wall that is going to be a real imposition on the landscape." It was too high a price for the city to pay in return for some of the attractive features of the proposal—including a covered mall connecting Government and Wharf and parking for 250 cars.

Mayor Peter Pollen and Ald. Mike Young echoed some of Bawlf's concerns over the question of bulk, and the resolution finally thrashed out for formal approval at Thursday's council meeting seeks the views of the Advisory Design Panel on this aspect.

Young said although he joined Bawlf and two others in voting against the development proposal at last week's meeting of the Advisory Planning Commission, it was only because he had misgivings on the building's possible bulky appearance.

If those doubts could be cleared up by council's design panel of architectural advisers he would be happy to endorse the developers' submission, he said.

"We should not let ourselves be conned out of a project that has considerable merit just because we are a little shy about massing," Young added. "You have to expect to give a little."

Under present downtown zoning rules the developers, Rosborough, Southam and Kornberg, can build to a maximum height of 140 feet and a density providing three times as much floor space as total site area. But under the proposed Central Area rezoning, now in preparation, the permissible height would be cut to 50 feet with the same 3 to 1 density.

The firm's actual proposal is for a density of 3.7 to 1 (including 30,000 square feet of shopping mall), with the maximum height of the hotel portion varying between 83 and 91 feet according to grade differences between Government and Wharf.

(Current discussions are directed toward a land-use contract, a device under the Municipal Act which allows developers to exceed normal zoning restrictions in return for providing certain public benefits such as malls and open space areas.)

At Tuesday's meeting, developer Don Rosborough said his firm was "at rock bottom" in meeting the design criteria of the city, and could not contemplate any reduction of the development without destroying its economic feasibility.

Referring to last week's narrow 5-4 vote by the APC in favor of the development, he said: "I am not prepared to continue to spend money without a pretty substantial endorsement. A 5-4 endorsement is a defeat."

The firm's architect, Wilfred Ussner, said he was "puzzled" why Bawlf had not raised his objections earlier, as he had been aware of the basic concept for at least two months.

Ussner said the extra density above zoning limits was a direct result of attempts to meet the city's criteria for a mall and generous parking provisions.

Such features could be ignored altogether in an alternative proposal strictly in accord with the site's zoning, which would still give the developers a "perfectly economic scheme," he said.

Aldermen Clyde Savage, Alf Hood and Tom Christie all said they believed the firm had made every effort to meet the city's requirements, and it should be allowed to proceed.

"I think it's a damn fine scheme and I see nothing wrong with it," said Savage.

Call It Neighborliness

The 'Volunteer Ethic' Is Alive and Well And Living in Greater Victoria Where 5,000 Community Workers Are Taking Part In the 1973 United Way Campaign To Support Services of 23 Agencies

A sense of neighborhood started the Community Chest campaign in Victoria 36 years ago and it is a sense of neighborhood that still underlies the campaign, now known as the United Way.

"It's neighborliness, a feeling of helping each other that is the basis," says Murray Glazier, chairman of the 1973 campaign committee.

And it has been a sound basis, he says, noting that the growth in complexity and size of modern society has brought governments to realize "a massive effort is needed to regenerate a sense of neighborhood, to create a scale that people can relate to."

That sense of neighborhood is reflected in the organization of the campaign.

Twenty-three local voluntary agencies share the proceeds of the campaign and their share provides the basis of their work in the community each year.

There are some 4,000 local people involved throughout the year in the work of these agencies. But at campaign time, closer to 5,000 local people — all volunteers — are involved in the joint fund-raising.

The administration of the Community Chest and the campaign are also handled by local people—all, except for a small office staff, volunteers.

And when it comes to who gets the money raised, agencies have to show that the funds will be spent locally.

This year's campaign goal is $680,000—down $45,000 from last year's goal as a result of rebudgeting and shifts in allotments.

Of the 23 member agencies, the YM-YWCA, the Red Cross, the G. R. Pearkes Clinic, the Boys' Clubs and the Victorian Order of Nurses, in that order, are the largest recipients.

The Y's allocation of $79,400 is earmarked for special programs which require subsidies, the Ys senior programs being self-sufficient.

Earmarking funds for projects is one of the new trends in the Community Chest program, points out president Peter Darling.

"We'll see more and more of this in the coming year. An agency will come to allocations committee with a request to fund one specific project and that particular project will be assessed."

At the present time, agencies taking part in the campaign must open their books to the scrutiny of the Chest's administration. Budgets must be submitted, books must be audited and administration costs must be shown to be small compared to other spending.

As for the Community Chest itself administration costs are less thas 10 per cent of the total amount raised. Of this one half goes towards the cost of the annual campaign and the other half goes to maintaining the continuity of the Chest's work throughout the year.

Darling points out that this low administrative costs compares to "30 and 40 per cent for campaigns where professional fund raisers are hired."

Since the annual campaigns were started in Victoria in 1937, close to $10 million has been raised—always with the same direct approach, the local control, the accent on local work, and that sense of neighborhood.

Of course, some things have changed. The campaign committee's information brochure this year notes "with the change in government at the provincial level, many people felt that the need for volunteer-run charitable appeals such as ours would end."

But it goes on to note "this has not proved to be the case. While the provincial government has indicated that some additional grants to agencies will be forthcoming, these are more than off-set by increasing costs, and the increase in demand for services. In fact, with the rapid increase in costs and population growth we are experiencing in this area the needs are greater than ever."

At the present time, funds raised the United Way represent about one per cent of the total health and welfare bill in Greater Victoria.

Will that one per cent eventually disappear and the community's charitable, health and welfare responsibility be assumed entirely by governments?

"I don't think so," answers campaign chairman Glazier. "The volunteer ethic is still important to people." And he notes that the "level of expectation" of each generation grows. What once was an "extra" has a tendency to become a necessity.

This year's United Way campaign in Greater Victoria started Sept. 17 and runs to Nov. 5. The residential campaign takes place Oct. 15 to Oct. 20.

UVic Facing Problems With Young Sue's Gift

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

"P.S. Please no publicity whatever!"

That was the way Mrs. Jeanne S. Simpson, or Young Sue as she was called, handled all her business.

Reading between the lines it becomes apparent Young Sue was known to love a sip of "French" sherry, talked at length of past experiences blazing trails in Lake Cowichan and she had no use whatsoever for electricity.

She started into her business venture with Fairclough seven years before her death last summer at 87.

There were many letters about her gift to UVic.

It was of paramount importance that her prized possessions be put to the best of all possible uses.

A small spot on the Lake Cowichan map, numbered lot 29, the gift is pretty much to remain as it was when Young Sue, as Fairclough calls her, settled there with her husband in 1912.

There are some 20 acres of undisturbed virgin forest on lakefront, a small meadow, two acres of farmed garden and an old cedar log homesite built in 1902.

Mrs. Simpson wanted the property to be used for scientific research and study. But she also wanted it to remain in as near a natural state as possible. She had her husband had kept it that way.

Back in 1912 Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Simpson arrived after marrying in London. They bought the "old Stoker Estate" and spent days exploring the mountains and valleys of the Cowichan area — all grist for her later pleas to environmentalists to maintain the wilderness status quo.

An interest in plant life promoted them to grow alpine plants and sell commercially. They imported a wide variety of species from China, Tibet, India and still there are over 100 various species of rhododendron at the estate.

"She was the most interesting personality and conversant in almost any subject," writes Fairclough to UVic's board of governors.

"While she refused to have electricity or oil installed for light and heat, she always possessed a radio to 'keep in touch'."

Why she decided to give the whole parcel to the university is anybody's guess, except, says Faircloub," she was interested in conserving wildlife and wanted it controlled by a responsible governing body."

That intention is made clear in a letter dated Sept. 25, 1966.

"It appeared somewhat hazardous to rely implicitly on the future intentions of an organization, however cultural it might be. It seems to me reasonable and prudent to insert some binding clause." She did.

It will be called the Stoker Estate as Mrs. Simpson wished because "the Stokers were well known in the early days by a large portion of the community here and in Duncan. Some pioneering romance belongs to them in this small corner of B.C. and I know that they would be gratified and delighted at the idea could they hear of it."

The land on the north side of the south arm of the lake will mostly be used for biology research with its attraction of fauna and water growth on the property says Fairclough.

"We hope to be in a position to be able to restore the building with the addition of electrical power."

Because the facility is not on the UVic campus, however, a major roadblock presents itself. Provincial financing is not applicable to such locations. Fairclough feels the site refurbishing presents "a great opportunity for corporation donations."

He estimates the primary renovations would cost about $20,000.

He hopes the estate will also be used for seminar type situations where the university can offer students overnight accommodation. Another plan allows for transplanting some of the Simpson plants to the UVic campus for a "Simpson Gardens."

The gardens, however, weren't expected by the donor. She expressed that clearly in her first letter to Fairclough — "To pass unremembered into the limbo is no sacrifice on my part — it suits me very well."

JOINT SPACE VENTURE SET

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a step described as a "new dimension in the Atlantic partnership," the United States has signed an agreement that will enable Europeans and European experiments to fly into space aboard the planned American space shuttle.

The agreement commits nine European nations to design and build the space laboratory, which is a key component of the national aeronatics and space administration's future reusable shuttle.

The shuttle is due to be launched in late 1979. Funding for it has been approved by congress on a year-to-year basis. The agreement of the Europeans to pay the full costs of the space laboratory, estimated at between $300 and $400 million, was seen as an important step in overcoming remaining obstacles to the program in Congress.

In return for their participation, the Europeans are expected to have a representative on the flight crew of the first spacelab mission.

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more?

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you the world's most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K. – now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary – to prove that sending me the 10 dollars . . . which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied . . . is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $100,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it – cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it – the Lazy Man's Way – a secret that I've shared with just a few friends til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that – nothing more, nothing less – the results will be hard to believe. Remember – I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again – I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and an 8-cent stamp. But what if I'm right?

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy-Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material – for any reason – within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A preliminary hearing has been set Dec. 17 to 19 for Norman Morris Stevens, charged with capital murder in the shooting death of a Saltspring Island hotel owner Sept. 15.

Stevens appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

The 20-year-old man is still in custody, pending a bail application which, in case of a capital murder charge, must be made in a higher court.

Stevens is charged with the murder of Walter Herzong, who was shot five times in the chest and stomach early Sept. 15 in his suite at the Harbor House Hotel in Ganges.

Cathy Toni Carson, 17, of 1960 Fort, was fined $75 for possession of hashish early Tuesday morning on Broughton Street.

Police said officers in a squad car heard the girl yell, "Here come the pigs," to three friends. The police stopped the car to investigate and saw Carson put something in her mouth and then try to throw it away. Police searched the area and found a small amount of hashish.

Judge Edmond St. Jorre said the girl had "openly invited trouble by her aggressive behavior in calling out insults to the police."

★ ★ ★

Strawford had originally pleaded not guilty to the charge, but changed his plea Tuesday.

Police said they found two marijuana cigarettes hidden in a fondue dish.

A Vancouver man was fined $50 after he ripped up a menu and broke a window in a Victoria restaurant early Tuesday morning.

Police said Richard Jason Stone, 22, went into Denny's Restaurant with two other people. Instead of waiting for the hostess to seat him, he went to a table, sat down and was given a menu. Later, one of the waitresses asked him to go to the end of the seating line because he had not waited there in the first place.

Stone ripped up the menu worth $4 and broke a $45 window.

St. Jorre ordered that Stone pay the restaurant $49 in damages.

Donald Joseph Murray, 19, of 1352 Patrick, was given a suspended sentence and six months probation after he pleaded guilty to shoplifting a $7.49 hardware item at a Victoria department store Monday.

★ ★ ★

A 21-year-old Cranbrook man was sentenced to 18 months in jail after he pleaded guilty to two charges of breaking, entering and theft.

George Stad broke into a home on Heywood Street in Victoria Sept. 9 and stole a ring valued at $250 and several other jewelery items.

He also broke into a motel room on Superior Street Sept. 11 and stole $80 in cash.

Stad was on parole from a 10-month prison sentence when the offences occurred.

He was also fined $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Armstrong was involved in a motor vehicle accident but left the scene. He was stopped by police a short time later.

PANTHER EX-CHIEF SUED BY ATTORNEY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver, 37, is being sued for $24,464 by attorney Beverly Axelrod, who said he owed her the money plus interest for his book "Soul on Ice."

Mrs. Axelrod also named the publisher, McGraw-Hill Book Co., and Cleaver's agent, Cyrilly Abels, as defendants. She charged Cleaver assigned her a 25 per cent interest in the book in 1968 but revoked the agreement last year. She said she had acted as his lawyer.

Ms. Roberts Climbed Red Tape Mountain

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Diane Roberts' husband once climbed Mt. Everest and now Ms. Roberts has won her month-long battle against a mountain of red tape.

Nearly four months ago, the Canadian-born photographer wed Jim Whittaker, the first American to climb Mt. Everest. But at the time they were married before a Seattle judge, the couple made certain that Ms. Roberts name was not changed.

"I wouldn't expect her to take my name any more than I'd want to be known as Jim Roberts," was how her husband put it.

The trouble came when Ms. Roberts went to register for her alien card, as the law requires.

"The immigration fellow looked at the card I'd filled out and looked at me and said he couldn't give me the oath unless I signed my name as Whittaker," she said.

The immigration service failed to answer a letter by Ms. Roberts about the matter, and a phone call only elicited a promise that she would be sent a card only in the name "Whittaker."

So Whittaker called Rep. Brock Adams (D — Wash.) of fice. And several attorneys in Seattle called acting immigration director Donald McClaran and asked him to put his legal staff to work on the matter.

"I could have paid $34 to get a state document as proof to immigration that Roberts is my legal name," Ms. Roberts said later. "But I figured that would be giving in and this thing should be resolved for once and for all."

U.S. FOOD BILLS UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food bills in the United States jumped last month as the Nixon administration lifted the lid on prices. Figures released Tuesday by the agriculture department say the tab for an entire year's food supply—theoretically enough to feed a household of 3.2 persons—was $1,653 last month, up some 8.1 per cent from July.

The Canadian Cop-Out —Concorde's New Look

They once had the bold eyes of eagles. Now they've the doubting eyes of chickens. And here we go again with our annual report on the folly of Air Canada and CP Air in turning a blind eye on the fast-approaching day of supersonic flight.

One of the editors I trust most, seeing this latest material on my desk, asks, "Do you really think any one in Victoria cares a hoot about the Concorde?" Well, maybe not. But I think we ought to care and we ought to care out loud that our two international airlines have put chicken-hearted caution ahead of the planning that might get us in early on the new age of flight.

Sometime in the summer of 1975 Air France will inaugurate faster-than-sound passenger flights between Paris, New York and Washington, between Paris and Tokyo by way of Siberia, between Paris and Buenos Aires by way of Dakar. At about the same time BOAC will begin a regular trans-Atlantic service between London and New York.

We now see, just over the horizon, the 12-hour world in which no major population centre will be more than half a day's flying from any other. Yet the executives of our two major airlines not only have failed to anticipate it, but continually bad-mouth the wonderful airplane that will make it possible.

So far as I can find out there was not a single Canadian aviation man present when Concorde made its historic debut on American soil last week at the dedication ceremonies of the new Dallas-Fort Worth airport. But there were plenty of the top brass of Braniff International which just happens to be CP Air's main competition on its Latin-American routes.

Consider, just for a moment, that first flight to the U.S. Concorde 02, built in France, opened up the Paris-Caracas route by a six-hour and 15-minute trans-Atlantic flight, as compared to the 12 hours it takes in the present-day jets. It then flew the 2,559 miles from Caracas to Dallas in two hours and 22 minutes, much of it at 57,000 feet and a speed of 1,360 miles per hour. The reporters and aviation men who were aboard were astonished at the quiet and absence of any sensation of speed when they de-planed.

It isn't simply that this is the swiftest of airplanes, though speed is now, and always has been, the name of the game in commercial flying. It will be one of the safest airliners of all time, the most tested airplane in the history of flight. Already the four prototype Concordes assembled by the British and French partners, have logged some two thousand hours of flight, more than a thousand of them at supersonic speeds. It will be a quieter, more fool-proof flying machine than any of today's jets.

Air Canada dropped its options and CP Air backed away from the beginning purely because of arithmetic. Their computers have told them that the airplane will be more expensive to operate, thus require higher fares. They ignore entirely the fact that even today first class seats are heavily booked, that businessmen who think of time as money will gladly pay a premium rate to cut their flying hours in half. Prime Minister Edward Heath predicts that it will be "the prestige way to fly" when they go into service and, for once, I think he is right.

Despite the American pressure groups, which brought about the cancellation of the United States' SST program, there are some long second-thoughts by the most knowledgable men in aviation.

James P. Woolsey, writing in the Air Transport World, puts it this way: "Concorde's introduction could generate more excitement than the first 707, and could spark a renewed public interest in the wonders of air travel. The industry needs it. The whole industry will benefit from it. And there will be significances attached to which airlines are supersonic and which are not.

"In the years since the introduction of jet service," Woolsey goes on, "there has developed a sameness throughout the industry. Everybody has basically the same airplanes, the same prices, the same everything. Now they are working for essentially the same schedules. In one swoop the Concorde will blow all the dust out of the airline industry. For the first time in too many years somebody will really have something different to compete with. We welcome it. We think the public will too. In an ironic twist, it might just be the Concorde that brings back the good old days."

And John McCutcheon, writing in the Chicago Tribune, says this: "A number of arguments have been raised against allowing this service (Concorde's flights to the United States) and most of them are bad. The worst ones are those based simply on commercial protectionism. The reasoning is that since the United States chose not to enter the SST market, and since American airlines have chosen not even to buy Concordes, we shouldn't give anybody else a chance to prove that we were wrong. This is a shabby attitude for a country that has always championed free enterprise and competition."

McCutcheon's article was under the heading, "Give Concorde a Chance." That is advice that's now too late for Air Canada and CP Air which have forfeited the golden chance to get in on the ground floor. They truly are chickens in a world of eagles.

ONE MORE YEAR

Victory city council agreed Tuesday to renew the lease on the old Court House in Bastion Square to the Maritime Museum — but only for one year.

During that time the city intends to make strong representations to both the federal and provincial governments, pointing out that Victoria is not prepared to continue its hefty subsidization of a museum which has wider than city significance.

The city's total financial support to the museum is close to $50,000 a year, which Mayor Peter Pollen has noted is three times as much as it spends on its own archives.

In making out the case for federal and provincial assistance to keep the museum alive, Victoria will state its willingness to relocate the museum in the Malahat Building on Wharf Street — for which it is now negotiating a lease with the federal government.

Royal Tour Set

Members of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay councils will tour and inspect the Royal Theatre at 10 a.m. Thursday, to help them decide on the merits of buying the building for $250,000.

The proposal, promoted strongly by Mayor Peter Pollen with the backing of city council, is to purchase and run the theatre as an interim home for the Victoria Symphony and other cultural activities.

Victoria has prepared a feasibility report on the proposition, but Saanich and Oak Bay representatives on Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee said last week their councils required more information before reaching a decision.

In answer to a question at his press conference today, Pollen denied he has any "political motivation" in pushing for the Royal Theatre acquisition to be concluded before the Nov. 17 civic election.

He said the proposal to buy it on an intermunicipal basis does have great importance to the Greater Victoria community, and he considers it would be "grossly unfair" for Victoria to have to buy and operate the theatre alone.

On the upcoming election itself, the mayor said the dearth of announced candidates for the mayoralty or aldermanic seats seems to indicate "we aren't going to have an election at all," in Victoria or neighboring municipalities.

"It's pretty ho-hum politics," he commented.

'Oak Bay Itself Polluting the Beach'

The pollution and silting of the bay near Oak Bay Marina are being caused by inadequate storm drains and municipal dumping, marina president Bob Wright said today.

Replying to accusations that the extension of the marina breakwater and the spur on Mary Tod Island were the causes, Wright said they had, in actual fact, helped clean some of the mess out of the bay.

"During the winter months," Wright said, "Storms and high runoffs result in overflow of the storm drains near Glenlyon School and raw sewage flows into the bay."

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White estimated today it would cost "between $300,000 and $600,000" to correct the situation. This, he said, might be done within two years "if the politicians vote the money."

Wright said he had asked the municipality to stop dumping fill at the marina's parking lot for the past two years, but without success.

"They were still dumping up until Monday," he said, "They had rip-rapped all but one corner and were dumping at that corner where there was no heavy rock to prevent it being carried away by the strong tidal action.

"We could see what was happening. They had a perpetual dump there. One day we watched and we could see a long finger of clay-colored water being whipped out and around and through the bay."

Oak Bay council voted Monday to have the corner of the parking lot rip-rapped to prevent any further erosion of the fill into the water.

An independent study carried out by the University of Victoria in order to determine if the marina is polluting the area has failed to do so.

In its summary it states:

"Coliform counts vary with tidal height. As tidal height decreases, coliform count increases. Sealand does not appear to contribute to the fecal pollution of Oak Bay Marina.

"Not only would this study be of interest to Sealand, which is vitally concerned with the health of its animals, but also indicates a need for tidal height standardization of public health sampling techniques."

Sealand curator John Colby says that daily monitoring of the water at the marina has proved that the breakwater extension and spur has helped cleanse the area through increased tidal strength, that also flushes into the bay, creating a back eddy that takes out some of the residue on the beach.

He said the $50,0000 hydraulic study, carried out by a Port Coquitlam company, Canada Hydraulics, for the federal public works department, had shown that this would happen.

He said the green algae that residents had seen on the beach was "very definitely possible growth" that had been contained in the fill swept from the parking lot into the water.

"When people are testing to see what impact variables have on the environment," Colby said, "the best way in the world is to use a broad range of animals.

"With delicate octopuses, fish and other wildlife to worry about, we have the greatest stake of all in making sure the bay is kept clean."

Colby said that in the five years he had been at Sealand the lowest mortality rate had been recorded since the breakwater extension was completed this spring.

Law May Force a Repeat Of James Bay Meeting

Tonight's public hearing by Victoria city council on the first stage of its huge James Bay rezoning plan won't be a proper public hearing at all, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen disclosed at his weekly press conference another public hearing may be required because legal advice indicates the full requirements of the Municipal Act were not fulfilled in advertising tonight's hearing.

City officials explained the act requires the elapse of three full working days between notification and the holding of the hearing, so that citizens have ample opportunity to inspect the detailed proposals at City Hall.

The last advertisement in the weekend newspapers appeared in Sunday's Colonist, and by 4:30 p.m. today there would have been three normal working days at City Hall.

But the official view is that today's working day doesn't end until midnight — hence the full intervening period won't have elapsed by the time James Bay residents start trooping into the council chamber for the 8 p.m. public hearing.

Pollen was obviously angry this morning in relating the slip-up to reporters, but had no other comments.

An indication of public interest in the series of James Bay public hearings came Monday night when about 150 residents attended an information meeting sponsored by the James Bay Community Association.

Separate School System Feared

Fears that a separate school system could evolve within the district were expressed today by Sooke school board chairman Fred Willway as the defence department moves ahead with plans for its own French language program.

Introduction of the French program for some 30 children of CFB Esquimalt personnel at John Stubbs Elemetary would have been "the thin edge of the wedge of a separate school system," Willway said.

This fear led the board to put size restrictions on a French program for John Stubbs when it was approved by the board earlier this month, said Willway.

The restrictions were unacceptable to the defence department, which rejected the school board offer and has opened its own 100 per cent French school for 31 students.

Base commander Capt. G. H. Hayes said the school will continue to operate unless the controversy can be settled.

The uproar over whether the French program for military children should be offered at John Stubbs led to the resignation Tuesday of Sooke school trustee Howard Drummond.

Willway said he would have resigned, too, over the matter, except his term of office is over this year and he's not running again.

"As far as we were concerned this was B.C. and in B.C. we learn in English," Willway said. "If they want to learn Spanish, fine. If they want to learn French, fine."

"We could also see segregation of pupils, which we don't like."

Willway said the board was upset to find that the DND had already planned three classrooms while the board was deciding what to do.

"Mr. Drummond was quite upset and the board was upset. I stated publicly that I was upset," he said.

"We were led up the garden path."

The department of national defence has been trying to arrange for a French-language program with the Sooke school district operating the program and DND paying.

The school board rejected the DND proposal Sept. 11. But following a meeting Sept. 14 with department of education and DND officials, the board was persuaded to change its mind.

At a special meeting that day the board approved a modified French-language program at John Stubbs, by a four-to-three vote.

This modified program — which restricted the program to a maximum 35 students, two classrooms and two teachers — was rejected by DND, which opened its own school Sept. 17.

Willway says as far as he's concerned, the matter is closed.

"I'm not going to call any more special meetings on it."

Hayes said today he has accepted the possibility he'll have to assume the role of school board chairman this year and form a board to oversee the new DND school.

And Yet Another Study?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The chief librarian has asked for a staff survey just three years after the $12,000 Woods, Gordon survey that led to the firing of then chief librarian John Lort.

The board will make a decision at its next meeting.

Machin said the system would be carried out in three stages. The first would be the interviewing of all personnel — maintenance, clerical and librarians — and "the identification of the primary and secondary needs of the system." It would also include "the gaining of acceptance for changes from the present system."

The second stage, he said, would be "the design of the system and the necessary forms, together with a comprehensive write-up of the method of evaluating the employees. Interim meetings would be held with those responsible for evaluation in order to ensure a common understanding of the appraisal process."

The study would cost approximately $5,000.

Observing that Machin's company had been used by Saanich and had done "a very fine job," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry asked why Miller had asked Machin to present his proposals and not asked other companies to present theirs.

"Generally, municipalities have various proposals from various firms," he said.

Miller said it was because Machin's type of company was the only one with headquarters in Victoria. Machin said he welcomed competition, "because we are highly competitive."

Newberry said another study so soon after the Woods, Gordon one would be "too much in the eyes of the public at least."

He added, "Going out on the floor and interviewing all the people like Woods, Gordon did — I just think it's too much."

"I can see it (the study) might have some benefit," Brian Tobin sad, "but have we a problem from which we're suffering that we have to have it — or is it another pretty study?"

"That's a pretty loaded question," replied Miller. "Certainly people we have are performing well — if they are in the right jobs."

Miller, who said the study would be on everyone, including himself, added he did not agree with all the Woods, Gordon report's findings.

He specifically criticized the fact it had resulted in staff being reduced "very drastically."

Miller said evaluation of personnel would be carried out over a period of between six and nine months, based on initial interviews.

Asked if the study would get adverse reaction from the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Miller replied that he didn't think so — similar studies in other areas had not resulted in union reaction.

Writ Seeks Ferry Strike Damages

A writ will be filed in Suprefe Court here today by a group of 30 Vancouver Island businessmen seeking recovery of damages claimed as a result of last month's B.C. Ferries strike.

The writ will be issued against B.C. Government Employees Union, marine branch No. 1, covering unlicensed workers on the government ferry system and the officers of the union local.

Victoria lawyer Louid Lindholm is representing the businessmen, mostly in the tourist industry, who claim they suffered substantial losses as a result of the strike which began Aug. 17 and lasted five days.

Lindholm said today the legal action is only on behalf of the plaintiffs named and not a common action on behalf of all businesses that lost revenue as a result of the walkout.

The amount of the damages sought is unstated.

LIBRARY WANTS SOME OF THAT 'EASY' MONEY

The Greater Victoria Public Library board will apply for an $11,000 Local Initiatives Program grant to assess the needs of the economically, socially and physically handicapped of the area.

The board decided to apply for the grant Tuesday in spite of opposition by two members.

Don Miller, director of library services, said he recommended applying because, "I have in the past two years come in contact with some of the people who received L.I.P. and Opportunities for Youth grants and it was really that that prompted me. . . ."

"I know," retorted Brian Tobin, "The troubadors and the fellas who went to listen to whales in their yacht!"

Tobin said, "People think it's easy money, because it's federal money they think it's not going to cost us anything. I think it's baloney. It's just one more of a thousand of these things that are going on across the country."

Ald Clyde Savage of Victoria contended that the people Miller termed "disadvantaged" probably wouldn't want to use the library services anyhow.

Miller said if the grant was approved a member of the University of Victoria's faculty would act as co-ordinator of the study, the study being carried out by graduate students or unemployed graduates.

The survey would study whether services could be extended to meet the needs of the "chronically unemployed, the unemployable, those who are economically deprived, the physically and mentally handicapped, those in correctional institutions, in hospitals and nursing homes and those receiving treatment for alcohol and drug addiction."

Miller said that consideration should also be given to supplying service to Indian reservations and to ethnic groups which may not be integrated into the life of the community.

Ald. Alan Newberry of Saanich said he was particularly concerned about the needs of the unemployed.

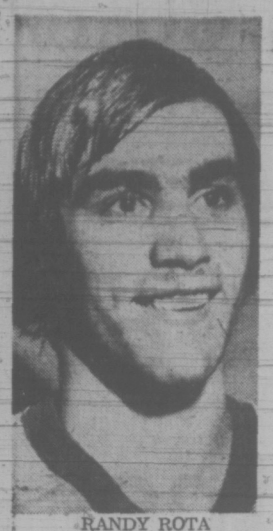
"Libraries are very middle class institutions," he said, "I'm concerned about those people who are not middle class people and don't come into the library, who are probably afraid to come into the library."

Ald. Malcolm Anderson of Victoria said "Budgets are fixed for L.I.P. grants in this area and the money should be spent as sensibly as possible. This may be one of the better uses."

Miller stressed the study would not result in a need for more facilities and staff.

"What we will be asking is how we can provide services to more people with our present facilities," he said.

"I am not against extending library services," Tobin replied, "But my point is I think it could be done much more cheaply and on our own hook."



RANDY ROTA
. . . Kings' Scooter

Scoring and a Definition Automatic With Rota

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Randy Rota likes the welcome mat the Los Angeles Kings throw out, and the changes in his National Hockey League allegiance are recent enough that he still appreciates some of the things Montreal Canadiens have done for him.

Montreal traded Rota and defenceman Bob Murdoch to Los Angeles last May for a player still to be named and a future draft choice.

The two players are being counted on by Los Angeles coach Bob Pulford to plug some of the deficiencies that existed last season and forced the Kings to miss the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Both will get their chance to say hello to former teammates when the Kings and Canadiens meet tonight at Memorial Arena, starting at 8. And, if you haven't any, don't worry about tickets. They're long gone.

Neither Rota nor Murdoch have sealed regular positions with Los Angeles. It isn't Pulford's style to make hasty training-camp decisions.

But, in workouts, and in three weekend exhibition games, Rota and Murdoch have been flashing signs that they would like to be Los Angeles regulars.

But scoring, for Rota, is automatic. Like his nickname. Sure as shooting, somewhere along the line this winter, he'll be defined as a "Rota Rooter."

It goes with his surname and style. Rota has an accelerating skating style that impresses. Not only can he turn it on in the speed department, but he also displays a change of pace.

There is strength, also, in his shooting and the five-foot-eight forward has been a consistently high scorer in every league he has played. He was a runaway champion of the B.C. Junior League in his final junior year at Kamloops.

He scored 31, 32 and 34 goals in his three years in the American League, his first as a pro.

"It's a fallacy to think Montreal's game is offensive oriented," said Rota. "They think defence just like any other team. Canadiens have so many good skaters, they can go both ways . . . and they do.

"You don't break into their organization unless you do play two-way hockey. I guess that is what really helped me most since I turned professional.

"At one time, I think I could have been accused of placing too much emphasis on scoring. My two seasons with Nova Scotia Voyageurs (Montreal's AHL farm club) got me playing both ways.

"Al MacNeil, the Voyageur coach, was a great help and I honestly feel I improved myself by playing those two seasons with Nova Scotia."

Rota does detect a difference in training-camp atmosphere.

"I think the players in the Kings' camp are closer to each other. They do things together. Murdoch and I both got that welcome feeling almost from the moment we reported," he said.

"Because Canadiens train in Montreal, we never got that feeling there. After workouts, everybody scooted out and we didn't see them until the next day."

Bowman Queries Morals In the Dryden Case

VANCOUVER — For a man with hockey's thorniest problem, Scotty Bowman wears his burden well. He even thinks he may work out of the box. In time.

Coach of Montreal Canadiens, the best team in hockey and visitors here tonight, Bowman a few weeks ago suddenly found himself without the world's best goalkeeper. Ken Dryden had abdicated his throne.

Hero of the Habs' Stanley Cup victory this spring and a key figure last fall in Team Canada's triumph over the Russian Nationals, Dryden on Sept. 14 simply told the Habs, "I quit."

The formal announcement from the front office said: "... Ken Dryden has decided to announce just a few days prior to training camp his intention not to abide by his contract."

So now Bowman and the Canadiens have to live without Dryden.

A guest at the Vancouver Canucks' face-off luncheon of the new season Tuesday, Bowman didn't delve too deeply into the missing Dryden-look, because who on the Canadiens could be happy about such a shock? But Bowman candidly spoke his piece and said:

"I don't agree with the morals of his leaving the team the way he did."

Dryden had let the Habs down for what has been announced as a $134 a week position articling for a Toronto law firm, but what in reality is possibly a five-year, $1.1 million package offered by the Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

Bowman also revealed the issue wasn't new. He said Dryden had agreed to his present two-year contract in March of 1972 and it was after that when salaries really started to escalate. Dryden then became more and more unhappy with his position and actually had been attempting to renegotiate his contract all through last season. But no deal. And no appeal to his pride would work either.

Not Doing What He Does Best

"I talked to him," Bowman said. "I told him I had been lucky in my coaching career with fine goalkeepers. First there had been Glenn Hall (St. Louis); then there was Jacques Plante, and in Montreal, 'now Dryden.'

"I also explained to him that even if he was unhappy with the Canadiens, he should still be doing what he does best.

"And that is stopping a puck."

So it didn't work, chiefly because Dryden and the Habs couldn't agree on what his rate of pay should be. Reports indicate his base pay last season was $78,000 with an extra $30,000 in bonuses. This was only seventh best, among goalkeepers and, in Dryden's view, not good enough.

"Miss him? Sure we'll miss him," said Bowman. "But we feel that in Michel Plasse, Wayne Thomas and Michel Larocque, we have people who will make their mark in the league.

"They may not be Drydens, but they have all played well in training and we're pleased."

And who's on top? "I'd say Larocque right now," said Bowman of the 21-year old rookie who played for Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the AHL last season and had a 2.50 average. "But it could change."

Is it possible the Canadiens may just have another rookie star on the way up? It was just over two years ago that Dryden himself skyrocketed to fame with a brilliant performance in the Stanley Cup series. Remember? To which Bowman replied: "could be", probably more in hopefulness than foresight, but nonetheless with a smile.

People and Teams to Watch

The rest of the Habs are mostly just fine with some minor hurts and Claude Larose out until the start of the season because of the broken leg he suffered last spring.

Rookies to watch, some ready some not, are defencemen John Van Boxmeer and Richard Wilson, and forwards Yvon Lambert and Dave Gardner from Nova Scotia Voyageurs, and Bob Gainey, the Habs' first-round draft choice, and Glenn Goldup, another draftee.

In a capsule report Bowman also said he saw it difficult for the Canadiens to have another season like they had last year (52 wins, 16 ties and only 10 defeats). "I think the Rangers will bounce back," he said; "they've been so close for so long." Of the Bruins he said Esposito hadn't been playing much, but Bobby Orr "has been looking very strong and playing a lot."

Someone asked if little Henri Richard, now 37, and enticed out of possible retirement last spring, was skating as fast as ever.

"I haven't noticed any change," deadpanned Bowman. Everyone laughed, including Bowman. The Habs would be ready.

Rugby 'Push' On

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

There'll be no slacking in those practice rugby scrums now.

At least coach Alan Rees will know.

Rees is in charge of the rugby squads at the University of Victoria, where the first of Dixon's inventions to come off his backyard assembly line is being put to good use.

Dixon has designed and constructed a new kind of lightweight scrum machine which can be fitted with dials to register stress and work load of the individual players using it.

Dixon's scrum machine is a far cry from the hefty wooden structures used by most clubs. It's made of light metal but is designed so it won't tip over. And, unlike the old-style heavy models which were stuck in one spot for the whole season, it's extremely portable.

"I've never seen anything like this anywhere in the world," Rees said. "It's a great thing for the game of rugby."

Rees has also been using the new apparatus to prepare his Victoria Crimson Tide forwards for their battle against the touring Fiji national team Thursday night at 8 at Royal Athletic Park.

"We're all fit and in great shape — and ready for them," Rees said with a confident smile.

Only an Exhibition But a Canuck First

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks, after three somewhat dismal seasons in the National Hockey League, may have found that winning touch.

The Canucks held off Montreal Canadiens 5-4 Tuesday night in an exhibition game before 15,570 at the Pacific Coliseum, their first win over the defending Stanley Cup champions since joining the league in 1970.

In other exhibition games, New York Islanders hammered Minnesota North Stars 5-1, Buffalo Sabres came from behind for a 2-2 tie with Atlanta Flames at Ottawa and Philadelphia Flyers registered a 9-2 score at home over Richmond Robins of the American League.

Vancouver's Andre Boudrias scored with just nine seconds remaining in the game for the margin of victory, stalling the Canadiens who entered the final period with a two-goal deficit.

At Unionville, N.Y., goalie Gerry Desjardins had to make only 21 saves off the North Stars who were playing their third game in as many nights. Dave Hudson and Brian Spencer sent the New Yorkers into an early lead.

After Fred Stanfield, obtained in an off-season trade from Boston Bruins, narrowed the margin, the Islanders put it away with a third-period barrage that produced goals from Ed Westfall, Bob Nystrom and Ralph Stewart.

Richard Martin and Don Luce gave the Sabres their momentum at Ottawa in the last three minutes of the game. Randy Manery and John Stewart scored for the Flames who remain unbeaten in four exhibition starts, including two victories.

At the Spectrum, Rick MacLeish, a 50-goal scorer last season, scored twice against the Robins to even the Flyers' pre-season record at 1-1.

Clinic Planned

Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association will hold it's section of a province-wide series of clinics Saturday at Windsor Park under the direction of Pat Hall.

The coaching clinic begins at 11 a.m. and the umpiring clinic is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

Head coach Liz Howes, with the assistance of Linda Westlund and Barb Lockyer, will conduct the coaching clinic while Nancy Hill will run the clinic for umpires.

PAIR IN LEAD

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller and Britain's Neil Coles shot wind-blown 66s and shared the early first-round lead today in the $150,000 John Player golf tournament.

About half the elite international field of 36 still were out in the cold, windy weather when Miller and Coles finished at five under par on the 7,070-yard seaside Turnberry Links.

Among the late starters in Europe's richest event were Arnold Palmer, Masters champion Tommy Aaron and Charles Coody of the United States, South African Gary Player and Bob Charles of New Zealand, the defending champion.

Big-Play Flubs Hurt Roughies

REGINA (CP) — The odds finally caught up with Saskatchewan Roughriders Tuesday night as they dropped a 25-23 decision to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Western Football Conference action.

As 16,310 home-town fans watched in frustration the Riders, who had pulled off so many last-minute miracles in previous games, blew the clutch plays.

Faced with a third-and-1½ situation on the Saskatchewan four-yard-line at 9:31 of the final quarter, Winnipeg quarterback Don Jonas opted for a quick pass play to Bob Larose, who cut in front of Saskatchewan's Lewis Cook for the touchdown reception.

When Walt McKee converted, Bombers had the lead, 24-23 and it was time for Saskatchewan to get moving.

But they remained stuck on their own 33, as a pitchout to Bobby Thompson produced no gain and a pass to George Reed was incomplete. After the punt, Winnipeg kept the ball for six plays before McKee kicked a single on a wide field-goal try from the 33.

With a minute and 21 seconds left in the game Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster desperately started throwing, first at Tom Campana, then to Al Ford. Both attempts failed.

On a third-and-10 gamble from his own 25, Lancaster then threw the ball almost 10 feet over the head of Rick Eber and the Bombers took over.

Jonas gave the ball three times to fullback John Bledsoe, whose 81 yards rushing were 16 more than the entire Saskatchewan team managed, and with apparent unconcern let the Riders take over on their own 16 with 14 seconds left in the game.

Lancaster connected on an 18-yard pass-and-run play to Reed, then on the final play of the game went for a down-the middle pass that was intercepted by Phil Minnick.

The win raised Bombers from the WFC cellar to a fourth-place tie with British Columbia Lions, who play Toronto Argonauts Saturday. Saskatchewan is still in first place, two points ahead of Edmonton.

Larose led Winnipeg's scoring, catching two touchdown passes, while halfback Stan Brown ran 33 yards for the other major. McKee made all three converts, adding a 10-yard field goal and a single.

Saskatchewan's three touchdowns all came on pass plays, each on the second reception the scorer made Tuesday—25 yards for Eber, seven for Reed and 24 for Campana. Jack Abendschan made two converts and a 31-yard field goal.

Mets Cool Montreal's Flag Hopes

By The Associated Press

New York Mets hold the upper hand in the National League East and are prepared to deal their aces in the remaining games.

"The Met pitching is coming on strong now," says manager Danny Ozark of Philadelphia Phillies, assessing the wild pennant shuffle. "And pitching is very important in the stretch."

The Mets strengthened their lead to 1½ games over Pittsburgh with a 2-1 decision over Montreal Expos Tuesday night while the Phillies defeated the Pirates by the same score.

In the other games, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Atlanta Braves 5-1, Cincinnati Reds nipped San Diego Padres 3-2, Houston Astros stopped San Francisco Giants 5-1 and Chicago Cubs nudged St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

Rookie Jim Fuller tagged a pair of home runs to help Baltimore Orioles defeat Detroit Tigers 8-3 in American League activity. Elsewhere in the American, Minnesota Twins whipped Oakland A's 9-4, Boston Red Sox nipped Cleveland Indians 3-2, Milwaukee Brewers went 13 innings to defeat New York Yankees 3-2, Kansas City Royals downed Chicago White Sox 6-2 and Texas Rangers defeated California Angels 4-1.

With the Expos in New York again today, the Pirates entertain Philadelphia, Chicago is at St. Louis, Los Angeles visits Atlanta, San Diego is at Cincinnati and San Francisco at Houston.

Cleon Jones slugged a tie-breaking home run in the sixth inning and made a game-saving catch in the seventh to pace the Met success.

Regals Again Beat Cougars

Despite a commendable performance from Glen Beuckert, who went all the way in the net, Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League lost a 4-2 decision to host Powell River Regals and evened their pre-season record at 2-2 Tuesday.

Ron Poole scored twice as Cougars outgunned Regals 21-2 in the opening period to take a 2-0 lead.

But Regals, an intermediate team, rallied in the second frame to outgun Cougars 15-5 and only some agile work by Beuckert held the Powell River squad to two goals.

Cougars play tonight in Lake Cowichan against the intermediate Lakers and travel to the mainland for a Thursday game against Langley Lords of the BCJHL in Cloverdale.

Meanwhile, Larry Pashak of Edmonton Oil Kings has been suspended for five games following a dispute with a linesman in an exhibition game Sunday.

Ed Chynoweth, president of the WCHL, made the announcement Tuesday and said Pashak kept pushing the linesman in an attempt to continue a scrap with Ryan Wecker of Medicine Hat Tigers.

In other WCHL exhibition action Tuesday, Mike Rogers scored his third goal of the night with five seconds remaining to give Calgary Centennials a 4-3 decision over New Westminster Bruins at Jasper, Alta., Kamloops Chiefs toppled visiting Seattle Totems of the Western League 4-2 and Swift Current Broncos scored four unanswered goals in the third period to down Regina Pats 7-5 at Moose Jaw.

Fed Fisheries Approval Still Needed for Dams

Amalgamated Conservation Society, stalled earlier this year by the federal fisheries department in an attempt to build a water storage facility on the upper section of De Mamiel Creek in Sooke, has now received permission from all but one government agency to proceed with the project.

Guess which one?

An engineering study, completed during the summer by Howard Elder, was included in a letter the ACS sent to federal fisheries, the provincial fish and wildlife branch and the water rights branch.

George Reid of Nanaimo, the branch's Vancouver Island fisheries biologist, replied "agreeing with us all the way through," said ACS president Brian Inglis.

Likewise the water rights branch had no objection but noted a licence would have to be obtained by another party as the ACS weren't landowners in the area. Subsequently, a letter was sent to Reid requesting the branch to take out a permit.

Some of the background for the project in the Big Swamp area was contained in the earlier letter.

"Construction would consist of two dams, a four-foot dam on the upper end of the swamp to control the flow to Tugwell Creek and a six-foot dam at the lower end with a two-inch drawdown pipe to control the flow to De Mamiel Creek."

The area to be flooded is now a five-acre peat bog which dries up almost completely during the summer.

"De Mamiel Creek presently supports between 3,500 and 6,000 coho spawners resulting in an annual fry hatch of 75,000 to 300,000 fish," states the letter.

"The majority of returning coho spawners utilize the section of De Mamiel Creek above Young Lake for spawning. This upper section of De Mamiel Creek does not have the same occurance of feeder streams evident below Young Lake and is prone to drying up very quickly. Coho fry losses as a result of the lack of water in the upper De Mamiel Creek have reached the magnitude of 25,000 to 75,000 in recent years."

A volunteer salvage program, spearheaded by Sooke fisheries guardian Jack Brooks, has helped save up to 50,000 fry from the area but isn't capable of solving the entire problem.

In addition, De Mamiel supports significant populations of chum salmon, cutthroat trout and steelhead.

Extra water storage would mean greater survival through an increased feed supply from a multiplicity of feed organisms found in the swamp area, better temperature control as a result of higher flow and an increased number of rearing areas.

Another point: "Little running or stored water is available at present in the area of the proposed reservoir which could be of value in firefighting."

Creation of a water area would also "foreseeably provide increased range for different forms of wildlife, especially during the dry summer periods."

"Rayonier of Canada, B.C., have indicated by letter their permission for construction of the two dams subject to certain conditions which we feel can be met and subject to the approval of all federal and provincial departments concerned.

"It is anticipated construction would take four or five days and hopefully would be carried out in the fall after the fire season . . . by experienced personnel."

The federal fisheries letter in reply started off in promising fashion:

"Generally speaking, the concept of your proposal has merit."

Further along, however, the department points out that a biological, engineering and economic study would have to be conducted "prior to judgment."

It also stressed the need to discuss a number of other points regarding flow rates, ensuring the strength and stability of the dam, protection and removal of trees from the storage area.

Unfortunately, the agreement with Rayonier expires Dec. 31 and all authorization must be obtained before construction can commence.

Money for the project, manpower and machinery is available from the residents of Sooke...

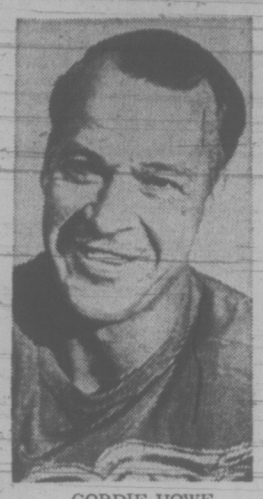
Quick Reply From 'Old Man'



GORDIE HOWE
. . . wastes no time

NEW YORK (AP) — The question had been asked from the moment Gordie Howe decided to end a two-year retirement and sign a contract with the World Hockey Association Houston Aeros: "Can the old man still perform as he did in the National Hockey League?"

It took Howe exactly 21 seconds to provide an answer.

Taking a pass from his 18-year-old son, Mark, the 46-year-old Howe rifled his first shot past New England Whalers goaltender Bill Berglund Tuesday night and scored the only goal in Houston's 1-0 victory over the Whalers in the third period of an unusual hockey exhibition.

The Aeros, Whalers, Winnipeg Jets and New York Golden Blades played one 15-minute period against each other at Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 7,092.

But it was not the spectacle of the four-team event, or even the appearance of Winnipeg's Golden Jet, Bobby Hull, that touched the crowd as did the comeback performance of the greatest goal scorer in the sport's history.

Apparently unaffected by the long layoff since his retirement from the NHL Detroit Red Wings in 1971, Howe skated smoothly, handled the puck easily, and did what he does best, score.

"He showed me something, I'll tell you," said Hull, who did a fair share of scoring himself in a long career with the NHL Chicago Black Hawks.

"And those kids are really going to be something," Hull added, speaking of Howe's sons Mark and Marty. The trio made sport history Tuesday night, becoming the first known father-son group ever to compete together in a major league event.

But before their first appearance, the two potential superstars were nervous.

When the puck was dropped, however, the youths acted as though they'd been through the pro hockey wars, performing solidly as the Aeros beat the Whalers, then the Golden Blades 1-0, before tying Hull's Jets 1-1.

In the other periods, the Whalers trimmed the Jets 2-0 on goals by Tom Webster and Jim Dorey and blanked the Golden Blades 1-0; the Jets topped the Blades 1-0 and lost to New England 2-0, while New York, the second-highest scoring team in the WHA lost all three periods by 1-0 scores to gain the dubious distinction of becoming the first team in sports history to be shut out by three different teams in one night.

Elsewhere in the WHA, J. C. Tremblay's third-period goal at Quebec City gave the Nordiques a 4-3 win over Toronto Toros and Chicago Cougars edged Cleveland Crusaders 3-2 at Milwaukee.

The WHA's Los Angeles Sharks were held to a 2-2 tie by Phoenix Roadrunners of the Western Hockey League and Vancouver Blazers were upset by Roanoke Rebels of the Southern Hockey League 7-5 as Pierre Henry scored three goals and added two assists.

Easy Victory By Claremont

Claremont hammered winless Parkland 7-1 Tuesday to climb within one point of second-place Mt. Douglas in the Victoria High School Soccer League.

Tom Elwell opened scoring at the new Sidney school with a goal at the 20-minute mark and goals by Brian Dye and Andy Masters gave Claremont a 3-0 lead at half time.

Parkland cut Claremont's lead with a goal by Doug Bailey at the 30-minute mark of the second half but the visitors stormed back to steal the victory with two goals by Doug Kishkan and singles from Bob Lee and Masters.

No Surgery But Joe Out

NEW YORK (AP) — Although New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath finds himself shackled with the sixth major injury of his football career, he insists he's not discouraged.

"Discouraged?" said Namath, who suffered a separation of his right shoulder when he was hit by linebacker Stan White in the first quarter of the Jets' 34-10 victory at Baltimore Sunday. "No, I'm over that by now."

Namath probably will not have to undergo surgery, but is expected to be sidelined for most of the remainder of the 1973 National Football League season.

"Namath's shoulder separation has been reduced," Dr. James A. Nicholas, the Jets' orthopedic surgeon, said after studying x-rays of the injury.

"Although the final decision will not be made for two or three days, as of now there is no plan to operate."

Nicholas said if surgery can be avoided and the shoulder responds to treatment, Namath might be able to return to action for the Jets' final four games of the season. That means he would miss the club's next eight contests.

Instructor School At Mayfair

A one-day certified coach-instructor school, sponsored by the American Junior Bowling Congress, will be held Oct. 1 at Mayfair Lanes.

AJBC manager Charles Hall will conduct the free school for adults interested in working with young people in the congress program.

The school will run from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. and to qualify as a certified coach-instructor, individuals must attend the entire class and pass a written examination at the end of the day.

More than 5,000 adults are trained each year to conduct bowling programs for young people 21 and under.

Bowling Speaker

Irma Boyd, a representative of the Women's International Bowling Congress from Greendale, Wisc., will be guest speaker at the Victoria Women's Tenpin Association open forum at 7:30 p.m., Thursday at Mayfair Lanes.

Mrs. Boyd last visited Victoria in 1968 when she helped the local associations form the B.C. Women's Tenpin Bowling Association.

While she is on the Island, Mrs. Boyd will also attend the third annual Provincial Jamboree, which combines both the B.C. Women's and Men's Tenpin Associations, in Nanaimo Sept. 29 to 30.

Split Decision to Cuba

MONTREAL (CP) — Cuba was awarded the 1974 world amateur boxing championships Monday after an emergency debate led to the competition being taken away from Montreal, the originally scheduled host.

Cuba was awarded the games by a one-vote margin, 20-19, after a vote was taken by delegates of 39 countries.

The championships were originally awarded to Montreal by the executive committee of the International Amateur Boxing Association at the Munich Olympics in 1972.

However, this was reversed Monday when delegates voted support for a European-bloc motion to revise the format to a structure unacceptable to Canada and then gave next year's championships to the only other applicant.

Britain, the Netherlands, Sweden, Italy and France lined up with the Soviet Union, Cuba and the traditional Eastern bloc of Romania, Czechoslovakia and Hungary while Canada's position was supported by the African and South American delegates as well as the United States.

The split was whether the championships would be conducted on the same basis as the Olympics or in a manner more comparable to the tennis Davis Cup. The 1974 competition is the first ever to be held apart from the Olympics.

Slump-Bothered Gerela Relinquishes Kicking Role

VANCOUVER (CP)—Placekicker Ted Gerela of the British Columbia Lions, once the best in his line of work in the Canadian Football League, has voluntarily taken himself off kicking duties with the Western Conference club.

Gerela, 29, who holds the CFL record of 30 field goals in a single season, has scored on just six of 20 attempts so far this season.

"I went in and talked to Eagle and said maybe we should make a change," said Gerela, a soccer-style booter with a career total of 123 field goals. "I know I'm in a slump — it's just one of those things that happens in pro sports.

"I don't think I'm washed up, not by a longshot. I think I can still kick."

Keys says Gerela is in no danger of being cut by the club. He will remain as backup running back.

Lions have acquired placekicker Ivan MacMillan, 21, expected here today on a five-day trial. MacMillan played for Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference in 1971 and part of 1972 before being replaced by Zenon Andrusyshyn.

Olympic Body Goes Without Provincial Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic committee will not ask a penny from the provincial government to stage the 1980 games, Mayor Art Phillips said Monday.

All the committee wants from the province is its goodwill, he told a news conference.

Mayor Phillips led a delegation to Montreal on the weekend and got backing from the Canadian Olympic Association for a bid to the International Olympic Committee in October, 1974.

The mayor said existing transportation facilities between Vancouver and Whistler — the games are to be split between the two locations — are "more than adequate" and said "we will not be asking for any more transportation facilities."

Gross estimated cost is $33 million, says the Olympic committee.

Dave McCall Is First To Collect Club Crown

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Fours are filled at Gorge Vale, Victoria and Glen Meadows while first-round matches followed form at Royal Colwood and Cedar Hill.

That was the progress of men's club championship tournaments at five of the Victoria District's six 18-hole golf courses last weekend.

Earlier, Dave McCall became the first this year to collect a club crown when he defeated John Pierpoint on Sept. 16 in the 36-hole final at Uplands.

At Victoria, defending champion George Bigelow defeated Jerry Lambe to lead the way into the fours. Also winning quarter-finals were Bruce McFarlane, Gordon Verley and Al Manson.

Colwood will declare semi-finalists this weekend with rounds scheduled Saturday and Sunday.

Favorites also won at Cedar Hill although all first-round matches haven't been completed. Cedar Hill's championship qualifiers have until next weekend to complete first-round matches.

Meanwhile, Vince Clarkson of Gregarah has emerged as champion of the nine-hole courses in the district. Clarkson carded a 214 total for 54 holes to win the fifth annual Lower Island Nine-Hole Golf Association championship.

Clarkson finished one stroke ahead of Bryan Hart of Ardmore. Glenn Newsome of Ardmore finished third with a 223 total with John Gee of Metchosin another stroke behind.

Bruce Craigie of Metchosin defeated Arnie Bumstead of Broome Hill in a playoff for the low-net trophy. Both scored net 179s for the 54 holes, finishing one stroke ahead of George Diamond of Broome Hill and two ahead of Gregarah's Gord Rawnsley.

★ ★ ★

Four golfers have scored holes-in-one in recent days. They were Betty Cranston, on the second at Victoria; Jim Ferguson, on the eighth at Cedar Hill; George Medland, on Colwood's fourth, and Ron Dinney, on the 16th at Gorge Vale.

Dinney counted his ace while playing in a foursome with Jim McColl, Tom Murray and Roy Chappell, a former assistant pro at Victoria now a teaching professional on Long Island, N.Y. Chappell returned to the States Monday after a short visit here.

Bill Wakeham and Al MacLeod, a pair of long-time golfing buddies who now play out of Cowichan, were the biggest point-collectors in the Island Cup point standings.

The Island Cup matches, which borrow from the Ryder and Hudson Cup formats, will be introduced to district golf this weekend at Glen Meadows. The top 10 professionals will be matched against 10 amateurs in the inaugural event.

Scotch foursomes, in which members' two-man teams play alternate shots with one ball, will be played Saturday and singles matches on Sunday. Golfers will tee off at 1 p.m. both days.

Selection to the teams was based on points accumulated in 11 tournaments on Vancouver Island this year.

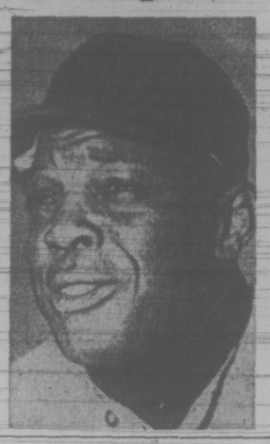
'Complete Player' Says Goodbye



NEW YORK (AP) — A choked-up Willie Mays bade farewell to baseball after being lavished with costly gifts Tuesday night and said, "In my heart, I am a sad man."

"Just to hear you cheer like this for me and not to be able to do anything about it makes me a very sad man," he said.

"This is my farewell. You don't know what is going on inside of me tonight."

The 42-year-old alltime star announced his retirement from the game less than a week ago, saying he felt he was not physically able to continue the grind.

Honored by old team-mates former rivals, prominent dignitaries of sports and government, and a sellout crowd of more than 50,000 in Shea Stadium, the boyish, enthusiastic superstar from the cornfields of Alabama could not restrain his emotion.

Once he turned toward the bench of the New York Mets, embroiled in a fight for the National League East pennant and said, in a quivering voice:

"Forgive me. I know it is as hard on you as it is on me."

He apologized for delaying the game with Montreal Expos and thanked Mets officials for enduring him despite a .211 batting average.

He told the gathering that his greatest desire now that he is out of baseball is to work with youngsters.

"Now that I have all I need," he added, "I can teach other kids to be a great an athlete as I am. If I see someone that has this talent, I will help them."

Some packages.

Three cars, two of them lavish limousines; a trip around the world; another trip to Mexico; a table full of golf clubs; a typewriter; plaques and citations from baseball and political chiefs; minks and diamond watches for his wife, and even a doctorate degree from Miles College in Alabama.

Joe DiMaggio, former Yankee great, sat in the Mets dugout and recalled lasting memories of Mays.

DiMaggio was reminded that he always had been Mays's hero.

The Boys Of Summer — the old Dodgers — were on hand in a cluster. They included Ralph Branca, Joe Black, Snider and Pee Wee Reese.

"I hated to see him come to bat, I hated to see him get on base; he was dynamite," said Snider, ranked with Mays and Mantle as one of the great outfielders of his era.

"He and DiMaggio, they were the greatest. They were the complete ballplayers," added Reese.

DODGER FANS LEAD IN ATTENDANCE

NEW YORK (AP) — Weekend crowds lifted major league baseball attendance for 1973 to a record 29,287,505, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced. The previous high of 29,193,417 was set in 1971.

These were, in the American League, Boston, Detroit, Milwaukee, New York, California, Chicago and Kansas City and, in the National, Chicago, Montreal, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Houston, Cincinnati and Los Angeles.

Oakland, with six home games remaining, needs less than 50,000 to reach the million mark.

WATCH THOSE DEARS!

Attention all hunters: The British Columbia Forest Service regards its lady tree planters as dears, not deer.

With upwards of 1,000 planters taking part in the province's reforestation program, together with a significant increase in the number of hunters in the woods, fear is being felt for the safety of the planting crews.

Forest service officials report several reasons for their concern: the planters usually spend a lot of time bending, they work in groups, and they make "thumping" sounds in the course of their work.

Hunters were reminded Tuesday to use extreme caution in burned-over or cut-over areas which are usually popular game hunting regions, and where tree planters are upsually working.

Officials of the reforestation division said no tree planter has been killed or injured by a hunter's bullet yet. They want to make sure it stays that way.

Crofton Mill Expanding

DUNCAN — B.C. Forest Products Ltd. will spend $7.6 million to expand the kraft paper capacity of its pulp and newsprint complex at Crofton.

At a meeting between company and municipal officials from the Cowichan Valley in Duncan Tuesday night, BCFP president Ian Barclay said the new program complements equipment being installed in a major $15 million plan aimed at combatting pollution and improving operating efficiency.

The addition of a second continuous-type chip digester and ancillary equipment would boost pulp production by 100 tons a day from the current 1,025 tons.

Barclay also said the refiner groundwood operations at the complex are in the process of being expanded at a cost of just under $2 million.

This system uses sawdust and shavings to produce ground-wood for newsprint production.

The digester project will require two years to complete and will include modifications to the chip screening and handling system with a re-chipper to salvage oversize material now rejected.

"The current expenditures of the Crofton operation totalling some $24.6 million, will substantially reduce both air and water pollution," Barclay said.

"The project will also improve efficiency of the mill and contribute to more effective utilization of the fibre resources," he said.

Punitive Land Measures Hit

Jint Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, said today he opposes punitive legislation against land speculators.

"While I'm sympathetic towards the aims of Agriculture Minister Stupich to control land speculation, I'm opposed to punitive action," he said. "It would be far better if the government bought the land as it comes up for sale."

He was commenting on a statement by Stupich Monday that the government may crack down on land speculation by large corporations and foreign interests.

Campbell noted in the past year valuable recreational properties had come up for sale in the Gulf Islands, but the government made no effort to purchase the land.

"So far the government has only bought the Ruckle farm, near Fulford, on Salt Spring Island," he pointed out.

Ed Mankelow, president of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said unless meaningful legislation is passed to curb land hoarding, the government will be faced with serious social problems.

He said speculators, many of them foreigners, have bought land to control access to crown property and are holding it in hopes of making big profits from recreation.

"Apart from controlling vast areas around lakes and along rivers, speculators have even bought land along highways for the express purpose of controlling access to public lands," he said.

He said no western European country would have allowed the problem to develop.

"We are facing a problem today resulting from years of neglect," he said. "No halfway measures will solve this problem."

Tourist Car Takes Toll

William Miller, of San Diego, found a parking space on Douglas near Yates and was trying to manoeuvre his car into it when his foot apparently hit the gas pedal instead of the brake.

His car lunged forward into a parking meter, breaking it off at the base and then collided with a tree on the boulevard, knocking it over into the doorway of a meat market, police said.

Miller escaped injury.

Police Ask Murder Aid From Public

Victoria police are appealing to the public for further information on the death of Mrs. Freda Helen Eveleigh.

Police have not been able to locate the weapon used, believed to be a .38 calibre revolver.

Inspector Richard Ward, head of the detective division, asks anyone who might have found an abandoned handgun in the past two weeks to contact his office.

"We'll treat each call with the utmost confidentiality," Ward said. "If the caller doesn't wish to give his name that is all right with us. We are just looking for leads . . . of any kind."

Detectives have searched all the "most likely spots," for the gun, said Ward, including the shoreline.

Clifford Earl Clark, 121 Kamloops, has been charged with the murder. He will appear before Judge William Ostler Dec. 4 and 5 for a preliminary hearing.

Construction Tax Removal Urged

The legislature's newest member borrowed a campaign plank from his illustrious father Tuesday and called for removal of federal and provincial sales taxes on building supplies used in home construction.

Bill Bennett, elected as the member for South Okanagan in a byelection Sept. 7, made his maiden speech in the House Tuesday and relied on much of his material from his father, former premier and Social Credit leader, W. A. C. Bennett.

Bennett said housing is a matter of concern for the people of his constituency and for people around the province generally.

He said the provincial government should co-operate with Ottawa and negotiate removal of the federal 12 per cent sales tax imposed on building supplies as well as the provincial 5 per cent sales tax.

Lifting of these tax burdens would bring housing within the reach of a greater number of British Columbias, he said.

The government should continue the Social Credit-initiated programs providing for homeowner grants and home acquisition grants, he said, but could directly lower the cost of housing for individuals by getting rid of the twin taxes on building supplies.

Bennett, who defeated five other candidates in the South Okanagan byelection, including form Conservative leader Derril Warren, also said British Columbians favor ownership of land on an individual basis and the government should consider moving beyond its plans for leasing of government-owned land for housing purposes.

He said private ownership of land is one of the few hedges an individual has against today's damaging rates of inflation, and should be encouraged by the government.

Another old Social Credit theme expressed by the new member was his disagreement with the concept of government investing public funds into private investment schemes.

He said that in cases where government money is being used to finance private industry, a government-supported company will develop the mentality that the government would never allow it to fold and would therefore not perform efficiently.

He advocated a system of low-interest loans, supplied to emerging industries at a time when they need them most, and repayable at a rate of 1 per cent interest after one year, 2 per cent after two years and so on.

To provide incentives which entice industries to establish themselves without due regard for their long-term viability is a dangerous practice, Bennett said.

Labor Beef Ridiculous: Barrett

A high-powered lobbying effort Tuesday by the British Columbia Federation of Labor against a so-called conscience clause in new labor legislation was termed "absolutely ridiculous" by Premier Dave Barrett.

"I've been met by a lot of people who've been talking to be about legislation that hasn't been introduced," said the premier late Tuesday, after meeting federation president George Johnson and secretary treasurer Ray Haynes.

"I don't know what they're talking about. The bill hasn't been introduced yet. I find it remarkable. It's absolutely ridiculous to have demonstrations and lobbying on a bill that hasn't even been introduced."

He promised that his government was soon going to bring in legislation to establish a new labor code.

"I guarantee you that industry in B.C., the employers' council, will be unhappy, the trade union movement will be unhappy — we're not going to satisfy anybody but the people."

Haynes said government backbenchers gave a "very sympathetic hearing" to the lobby.

Haynes said his talks with government members confirms the reference in the throne speech to proposed legislation recognizing "the sanctity of individual religious beliefs" means the Rand formula.

"It's quite clear that the reference is to not having to belong to the union," he said.

The formula, named after the Ontario justice who drew it up, makes union membership voluntary but dues payment compulsory.

Haynes said his representatives expressed the fear such legislation would mean an end to the union shop and were well-received by backbenchers. Cabinet ministers, he said, were non-committal.

Lions Gate Repairs Set

The Lions Gate bridge, linking the north shore Burrard Inlet communities of North and West Vancouver, will get a $5 million repair job beginning next spring, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Tuesday.

Lea said the bridge surface is in poor condition and will be replaced in sections.

He was replying to charges made in the legislature by Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver — Howe Sound) that the bridge is a menace.

Lea said a new deck and surface will be put down on the main span to eliminate slippery conditions.

A highways department official said the work would take at least two years.

Work will be done between midnight and 6 a.m. with traffic being routed over the second narrows bridge further up the inlet.

OPEN SPACE SLATES RED EARTH FOR ONE

A single person performance comes to Open Space theatre this week.

The person is Vincent Balestri, a graduate of Goodman Theatre School in Chicago who has spent three years acting and directing for various groups and for the Looking Glass Dance Theatre of Toronto.

Red Earth: A Western Myth, is the title of the one-man theatre show of which Balestri is author and performer. It will be seen at Open Space Thursday, Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m.

According to Balestri's own comment—"Red Earth is a totally new form of theatre, using theatre as a vehicle to express a personal reaction to political and social events as opposed to an actor playing a role created by someone else.

"It involves the performer exploring his deepest feelings and then presenting himself openly to the audience, not to convert or persuade but as a gift."

Red Earth explores the author-actor's sense of guilt for the damage his culture has done to the Indian way of life and self-esteem.

N. Africa Aid Staff 'Racist'

OTTAWA (CP) — Three MPs, including the parliamentary secretary to the external affairs minister, have concluded from a 10-day trip to North Africa that the Canadian aid program there is run inefficiently and is sometimes staffed by racists.

Pierre De Bane, parliamentary secretary to Mitchell Sharp, told reporters Tuesday that some Canadian aid workers he met in Tunisia, on contract to the Canadian International Development Agency, "admitted to me that they were racist."

"That is they did not appreciate the Arabs with whom they were working."

De Bane supported the view expressed by John Harney (NDP—Toronto Scarborough West) that the government's aid is spread too thinly over too many countries and too many projects.

De Bane, Harney and former diplomat Donald Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) have just returned from their brief tour of Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia. All but Mr. Munro held a news conference Tuesday to report their findings.

"We are into too many kinds of activities," Harney said.

The aid program satisfied "our own national ego" more than the needs of poor countries.

The two MPs were especially critical of the program in Tunisia, where they said morale among Canadians is low and money seems to be misspent.

Harney referred to one $3-million project on rural development as "one hell of a lot of study and no bloody action."

In the 1972-73 fiscal year, CIDA proved $13.6 million to Tunisia, $5 million to Algeria and $4.3 million to Morocco.

De Bane said that despite faults in the aid programs, he would like to see Canada increase its foreign aid from the current level of about $500 million yearly.

Pulp Firm Agrees To Share Chips

HOUSTON (CP) — Northwood Pulp and Timber Ltd. has agreed to comply with resources Minister Bob Williams' order that it sell half of its residual wood chips from its sawmill here to Eurocan Pulp Ltd., at Kitimat.

At first Northwood refused to comply with the order but 10 days ago the company made the offer to Eurocan on a relplacement cost basis.

There is still controversy about what the price should be.

North Central British Columbia is short of chips.

Northwood, which owns the sawmill here through its subsidiary Bulkley Valley Forest Industries Ltd., could replace its supply from its plants in Penticton, at an estimated cost of $40 per bone dry unit. Wood chips normally sell in this area for about $10 to $11 per BDU. A BDU is an arbitrarily-set volume of wood chips in general use by interior B.C. sawmills.

STANDARD STORE HOURS BID

The British Columbia branch of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada has asked the provincial government to remove control of store hours from municipalities and to take over, through the legislature, the controversial problem of store opening hours.

Ross Douglas, manager of the association's Vancouver branch, said Tuesday that the association recently filed a request with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald asking that legislation be brought in removing control of store hours from municipalities and placing it in the hands of the legislature in order to achieve uniform store hours across the province.

He said his organization wants to end the wide variations in store hours now used but agreed some concessions would have to be made in areas catering to tourists.

Tanaka Off to Europe

TOKYO (WP) — Prime Minister Tanaka flies to Paris today on the first leg of a 16-day tour of Europe and the Soviet Union — the most extensive round of international summitry ever undertaken by a Japanese leader.

Tanaka's tour may or may not produce tangible diplomatic gains of the sort he can bring home with pride.

Whatever the outcome, the trip is considered of major importance as a demonstration of this country's growing political involvement with the world outside and its continuing emergence from the diplomatic shadow of the United States.

Food Chain 'Unfair'

The B.C. Federation of Labor has declared all Super-Valu stores in the province "unfair," secretary Ray Haynes said today.

He said Super-Valu is "the only major food retailer in British Columbia to involve itself in the unsavory and unconscionable attempt now under way in the United States to smash the United Farm Workers Union.

"The struggle by these farmworkers for the right to belong to the union of their choice is much more than a simple trade union dispute—it is a battle for social justice that must involve all sections of the community."

Haynes said Super-Valu is the only major food chain in B.C. to continue selling California and Arizona grapes.

"The B.C. Federation of Labor has therefore declared all Super-Valu stores unfair and urges all members of the public to support Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Union by not shopping at Super-Valu stores until they remove the grapes from their stores," he said.

The farmworkers union and the Teamsters Union have been involved in a battle over representation rights in California vineyards.

Race Crisis Warning

LONDON (AP) — A group of MPs warned the British government today of a brewing racial explosion unless authorities face the difficulties of educating non-white children.

A commons committee said there are more immigrant children in schools than officials admit.

Its report said too many people working with the problem are reluctant to assess it realistically because they fear the true facts may be used against the immigrant communities.

"For reasons which we accept as sincere, though we think them misguided, there is a strong temptation to play down the challenge to our schools which immigrant pupils have posed," the report said.

LIFEGUARD POOL HERO

A University of Victoria student is credited with saving the life of a 12-year-old boy who got into difficulties during a swimming lesson at St. Michael's University School Tuesday night.

Carey Creek, working as a part-time lifeguard, was supervising a class of 10 young swimmers when he noticed Eric Jason Everett, from Calgary, lying at the bottom of the pool at the deep end.

Creek dragged the youngster to the surface and applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. The boy was revived and taken by ambulance to Royal Jubilee Hospital for examination.

Victim Awarded $160,000

CALGARY (CP) — A 28-year-old Czechoslovakian immigrant, who has been a paraplegic since a shooting accident four years ago, has been awarded $160,000 damages by the Alberta Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice W. K. Moore also awarded George Znaminko of Calgary $11,805 special damages to cover a claim by the Alberta Hospital Commission for treatment since the shooting.

He said he found Gerry DeWitte of Calgary negligent in the operation of a .22-calibre rifle July 20, 1969 while he and Znaminko were target shooting.

Court was told Znaminko was hit in the neck by a bullet from DeWitte's rifle and has been paralyzed from the mid-chest down since.

The justice said he took into account the plaintiff's loss of earnings as an apprentice electrician over the last four years, his loss of future earnings, pain and suffering both past and future and expenses other than hospital costs, hospital expenses were covered in the second award.

Police Act Lauded

REGINA (CP) — A proposed new Saskatchewan Police Act would help end politics within police forces and would "professionalize" policing, the president of the Saskatchewan Federation of Police Officers says.

Federation President Selmer Johnson — a Regina detective and also president of the Regina Police Association — added in an interview that the act may indirectly give Regina a needed new police building.

Tower Named

CALGARY (CP) — The New Alberta Government Telephones tower in downtown Calgary will be named after Len Werry, former telephones minister who died in a car accident last February, Mayor Rod Sykes has announced.

The $13 million building will open next month.

Auto Noise Worst

EDMONTON (CP) — Heavy traffic, which grows in volume every year, has been permitted to encroach far too heavily on residential areas in the city.

In a report released today, Bolstad said noise from vehicular traffic was of greatest concern to citizens. Aircraft noise in the vicinity of the city's downtown industrial airport and associated flight paths was of secondary concern.

Snowmobile Act

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's Snowmobile Act will be put into effect Oct. 1, the attorney-general's department said in an announcement distributed Tuesday.

The act, passed during the spring session of the legislature, provides for compulsory registration of snowmobiles, which are operated on other than private property. It also requires insurance coverage for such vehicles.

The act requires operators of registered snowmobiles to hold a valid motor vehicle driver's licence and be at least 16 years old.

Full Speed Ahead

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Housing Corp. will proceed immediately with the government's new senior citizen's housing program, Dave Russell, the corporation's chairman, announced Tuesday.

The program's major objective is to produce a more effective system for providing housing for the province's senior residents. Applications for housing projects now are being considered from a variety of sponsors, including foundations, individual municipalities, service groups, religious organizations and similar registered non-profit societies.

Beets in Trouble

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The life expectancy of the sugar beet industry in Southern Alberta is short, say local producers.

High prices for other crops and relatively low returns on sugar beets are causing farmers to consider growing alternative crops on the 39,000 acres currently planted with beets.

An official of the Alberta Sugar Beet Growers Association said he is afraid the industry could collapse like it did in Ontario several years ago when farmers turned to growing tobacco.

IWA Sets Anti-Multinationalism Goal

VANCOUVER (CP)—Worldwide action to combat multinational corporations which "are spreading their tentacles" all over the globe was set as a goal Tuesday by delegates to the 28th convention of the International Woodworkers of America.

A resolution passed by about 400 delegates also called on international officers of the 115,000-member union to investigate and report on how worker participation in corporation boards and management decisions is being achieved in various parts of the world.

Collective bargaining goals, including the right to strike during the term of a collective agreement and in support of workers in other bargaining units, were laid down in another resolution approved in a session devoted primarily to reports from the IWA's department of research, education and collective bargaining co-ordination.

One delegate said it might be passed off as a well-meaning, futile, "motherhood" proposal but warned that it could well be the only way to take in multinational conglomerate employers with interests in other countries and industries that could make them almost immune to the union's strike weapon in the U.S. and Canada.

The international executive board, which submitted the resolution, said multinational corporations are encouraged by the national taxation policies of the U.S. and Canada and woodworkers world-wide are "increasingly menaced by common employers utilizing common management personnel, common policies and common tactics."

International officers said they will strive for action by woodworkers on a world-wide basis by trying to develop greater co-operation among IWA regional councils, and by strengthening ties with national unions of lumber and wood products workers and with woods workers everywhere.

Another floor delegate supporting the resolution said "workers have the most in common at the bargaining table and it is vitally necessary to make use of this common interest."

H. Landon Ladd, second international vice-president, told delegates the IWA "has not done the job on co-ordinated collective bargaining, except within regions, and it will be hard."

"Giant corporations are not concerned with nationalistic aspirations," he said, adding that only international unions can bring to bear international pressure on the firms.

The resolution on collective bargaining goals cited a climb in the cost of living and in profits of lumber and wood products companies.

"The American and Canadian economies are faced with the continuing danger of the type of spread between income of those who own and those who work which exists in primitive, authoritarian economies," it said.

Adopted along with wage and benefit improvements and company-paid pensions and insurance programs as goals was a plan to negotiate for the right to have wage scales opened at least one each year for negotiations with the right to strike during the term of the collective agreement.

The IWA also wants to negotiate common termination dates, "limited no strike" clauses permitting strikes in support of workers in other bargaining units, or clauses permitting workers in one unit to stay on strike in concert with workers in other bargaining units with the re[illegible] terms of each agreement to all units.

Delegates voted that another primary objective in bargaining will be to have regional councils and local unions agree to insist on simultaneous settlements with no new agreements signed in one bargaining unit until all have reached satisfactory settlements.

UNION NEED SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — Interest in international union solidarity must reach down to the factory floor and into the logging camps," John Lofblad of Geneva, general secretary of the International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, said Tuesday.

"We have a great message to carry forward," he told the International Woodworkers of America convention. "The message of solidarity came to the exploited lumbermen in northwestern America, and Scandinavia, and made it possible for them to build strong unions who fought for the conditions we have today."

'No Jobs Are Safe . . .'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the International Woodworkers of America who say they would like to help lower-paid members in the southern U.S. were challenged Tuesday to "put their money where their mouths are" by supporting completely co-ordinated contract bargaining in North America.

Paul Puch of Local 5-331, Emporia, Va., told the union's 28th constitutional convention "the serjousness of the plight of members in the south doesn't seem to come home to members from other regions."

"No jobs are safe in the U.S. northwest or British Columbia as long as you allow major wood producers to exploit us where we come from," he said.

He was speaking to the gathering of some 400 delegates in support of his local's resolution calling for international executive action to get uniform contract anniversay dates, pensions, health and welfare benefits, vacations and paid holidays for all employees of major wood producers in the U.S. and the same for all such workers in Canada.

The resolution was referred — after heated discussion — to the collective bargaining committee to be brought back to the convention after some changes, mainly regarding implementation of such a policy.

International officers and delegates expressed fears about what effect there would be on regional and local union autonomy if the executive were given the power to do what was asked in the original resolution.

H. Landon Ladd, second international vice-president, who had told the convention the collective bargaining committee did not support the original resolution, supported the move to come up with a version acceptable to delegates.

Speck Death Contracted

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois prison officials said Monday an inmate told them he was hired for $5,000 to kill Richard Speck, convicted murderer of eight Chicago nurses.

"He said he was hired to kill Richard Speck, but he wouldn't say by whom," a corrections department spokeswoman said.

Speck, 31, an itinerant seaman, was convicted of the 1966 mass murder of eight student nurses in their Chicago dormitory. He originally was sentenced to die in the electric chair but was resentenced to a 400-1,200-year sentence after a U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1972 voided the death sentence.

600 MILES –OR DIE

LONDON (AP) — Claire Puzey has been chosen Miss British Rail Commuter 1973. The four-year-old girl must travel 600 miles a week or die.

Claire has no kidneys and makes a 200-mile round trip three times a week from her home in rural Hampshire to be treated on a kidney machine at Guy's Hospital in London.

She has been commuting for three months since her diseased kidneys were removed. Last week her fellow travellers on the 6:26 to London were told why the little girl with the bubbling laugh was making the trip.

British Rail area manager Harold Ward greeted her Monday at her home station of Christchurch and said: "You have become the sweetheart of the Southern Region."

He gave her a special train badge and handed over the passengers' gift, an inscribed copy of Kenneth Grahame's classic The Wind in the Willows, the story of a ne'er-do-well rich toad whose taste for adventure lead him astray.

Harry Staff, a publisher, sat Claire on his knee as the train set off and read her the inscription: "Presented to Miss British Rail Commuter 1973, with all good wishes from British Rail staff and her commuting companions."

Hot Memos 'In Nixon Files'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Presidential aide Patrick Buchanan told the Senate Watergate committee today the White House has stored pre-election political strategy memos with President Nixon's official papers to protect them from subpoena.

Buchanan, a speech writer who opened his first appearance before the committee by claiming its staff tried to damage his reputation with news leaks, said he did not bring along subpoenaed documents dealing with campaign strategy on the advice of White House lawyers.

At one point, he said he had urged Nixon campaign forces in 1971 to mount a concentrated effort against Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, then the leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination. But he insisted that he never advocated any illegal actions.

"Is it the position of counsel at the White House that these memoranda dealing with political campaign strategy are not available under the subpoena because of executive privilege?" asked the committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash.

"I think you would have to ask (White House) counsel what their position is, but I think that's not unreasonable in light of the fact that many of the memoranda are to the President of the United States, many of the memoranda deal with recommendations for presidential action, many of the memoranda were prepared at the direction of the president," Buchanan replied.

A summary of committee staff interviews earlier with Buchanan indicated he was part of a White House group that plotted "dirty tricks" in the 1972 presidential campaign, but he said today that his memos reflected nothing "illicit, unethical, improper or unprecedented."

He acknowledged that some of the language used in the memoranda was "uninhibited."

Buchanan said the memos covered the 1971-72 period and were taken from his personal files earlier this year to the basement of the executive office building next door to the White House for inclusion with official presidential papers.

Committee chairman Sam J. Ervin, D—N.C., who has had a running battle with the White House over the scope of executive privilege, complained there were no proper grounds for keeping the memos secret.

Companies Act Proclaimed

Regulations under the Companies Act, passed during the spring session of the legislature, were proclaimed by the cabinet Tuesday and will come into effect Oct. 1.

The 24-page list of regulations by which companies must operate include procedures for, preparing financial statements, directors reports, notices and forms, proxy, solicitation, voting shares, election of directors and appointment of auditors.

Regularions proclaimed Sept. 21, 1967, under previous companies legislation were rescinded by the cabinet order.

The companies act was passed April 12, and was designed to provide greater protection for shareholders and the public.

It incudes such changes as establishing employees' wages as a priority in the event of the company going into receivership, allowing minority shareholders greater opportunity to protest their company amalgamating with another and enabling shareholders to take action against company directors who act on "inside" information.

Cabinet orders made public today also proclaimed a section of the omnibus bill, the Statute Law Amendment Act, passed in the spring session.

Section 19 amends the Taxation Act by adding land and improvements designated for future hospital use and held by a non-profit society or corporation that operates a hospital to the list of land exempt from taxation.

Major oil companies are conducting costly studies with a view to building a natural gas pipeline through the Mackenzie River valley, and conservationists are arming themselves to fight the project. Fred Bruemmer travelled through the area and reports this Saturday in Weekend Magazine on the arguments in favor of the pipeline, and the damage it could do to the fragile Arctic ecology.

CONSUMING NEWS

Why does a food store have a "private label brand"?

There are a number of reasons that some companies have their own branded food lines. Some company brands are made strictly to a price to undercut 'national brands'. Other food stores are also in the manufacturing business and use their stores as 'outlets' for products made under various names.

Woodward's Supreme brand foods are made by what we consider to be the best packers in a particular line. They're packed to our exacting specifications and those standards are very high. We can guarantee a packer a quantity order without his usual selling, advertising and distribution costs and therefore can offer you good value on Woodward's Brands. There's one other reason we have a 'private brand' . . . we know you'll like the flavour and quality . . . our name is right on them and that's just got to be good advertising for us.

St. John's Lays Claim To 'Oldest City' Title

By JAMES H. HUSSEY

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Citizens of this seaport settlement, the capital of Canada's 10th province, claim it is North America's oldest city.

It was 390 years ago, on Aug. 5, 1583, that Sir Humphrey Gilbert entered the port and claimed the island in the name of the Queen. And when he arrived, the port was already a bustling place.

Historians agree that the port was known long before to the Vikings who explored the island's coastline south from Labrador as far back as 1000 A.D.

On June 24, 1497, the anniversary of the feast of St. John the Baptist, the port was rediscovered by John Cabot, hence the name St. John's.

For almost a century after its discovery the port was used as a haven by fishermen from many nations, but no serious attempt was made to colonize it.

However, as the great cod fisheries developed and knowledge of the island spread, both the English and the French expressed desires to possess the island.

PORT ATTACKED

Three hundred years ago, in 1673, the port was attacked twice, first by pirates and then by the Dutch. In 1672 and again in 1708 there was war between the English and the French. In both instances, the French captured the harbor and laid the town waste.

The last battle between the English and the French in Canada was fought in 1762 on the slopes of Signal Hill overlooking the entrance to St. John's harbor. Today, France's only possession in North America is the territory of St. Pierre-Miquelon, two small islands with a population of approximately 5,000 just off Newfoundland's south coast.

Despite a stormy history, including being wiped out twice by fires, St. John's has grown into an active year-round port. Strategically located in the major shipping lanes of the Atlantic, it caters to ships from many countries, especially fishing craft, for repairs, fuel, food, water and supplies.

During both world wars the port was of great importance to the Allies. It was the focal point of Second World War mid-ocean navy craft, comprised mostly of Royal Canadian Navy ships responsible for the protection of convoys.

Since Confederation, the federal department of public works has spent $20 million improving the port and the National Harbors Board, which assumed jurisdiction over the port in 1965, is currently conducting a study to determine the requirements of the port for the next two decades.

It's being estimated by local business and marine interests that it will take at least another $10 million to bring the port up to full capacity.

New Revolution 'Sleeping Giantess'

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's another revolution underway in the feminine world, influenced to a degree by "lib," but more propelled by its own new awareness.

One social scientist calls it the awakening of a sleeping giantess. "This giantess is the mass of working class women, some 40 million strong . . . and our society will never be the same again," say Dr. Burleigh Gardner, chairman of the board of Chicago-based Social Research, Inc.

Gardner says that the strongest critic of the women's lib movement has been the "working class woman" yet she has been strongly influenced by it and consumerism, both called "deeply running currents of social change."

Whatever the causes, these 40 million women, representing almost 60 per cent of the adult female population, have changed their roles.

As Gardner says, "after decades of being one of the most stable, unchanging groups in North American society," they've emerged as a "new social, political and economic force to be reckoned with."

Gardner reviewed findings of a new study, results announced Tuesday in New York, of blue collar wives in eight metropolitan areas.

The women ranged in age from 20 to 49 years, and 94 per cent were married, the others either divorced or widowed.

Social Research, a social and marketing research organization that Gardner founded in 1946, last did a similar study of working class women in 1965.

Gardner said most perchanges in the attitudes of the wasive and dramatic of the awakened blue collar wife are her views as wife, mother and homemaker.

"For years," he said, "research has shown that her life was a captive triangle of husband, children and home . . . today these women are rejecting such limitations.

"They feel women should have a choice of careers, homemaking or both.

—A change in career values. Almost a third say they would not choose homemaking as a career if they could go back to being 15 years old.

—A new desire for independence. The study in 1965, showed that 48 per cent thought a second car was a luxury. Today, the same number see it as a necessity.

—A desire for fewer children. in 1965, the majority saw the ideal family as having four children. Today, 71 per cent in their early 20s say they plan to have two or fewer children.

—A new interest in herself as a person rather than as an instrument for the care of family and home, reflected in a change of priorities from wanting products that helped her mother and older sister serve their families to those that will free her from housework or which contribute to her own comfort and gratification—for instance, an air conditioner instead of a sewing machine.

—A new interest in community and jobs. She is expressing a marked interest in the larger world, no longer confining herself to solely domestic matters.

"Clearly," said Gardner, "to mix my methaphors, what this boils down to is that the new working class woman is determined to have her cake and eat it too in the best of both possible worlds . . ."

COURT REPORTER Thelma Randall retired this month after 21 years as court reporter and secretary to Norfolk County court judges at Simcoe, Ont. She has spent more time in a courtroom than many lawyers and witnessed more than 10,000 court cases.

Discrimination On the Job Faces Purge

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's nine million working women have been given their biggest boost towards job equality to date in government proposals to ban sex-discrimination by law.

The new proposals, which came at the end of a long struggle for some sort of sex legislation, would attempt "to eliminate unfair discrimination on grounds of sex wherever possible and to change the prejudiced attitudes which give rise to it."

The planned legislation would work in both ways — while women would have equal opportunities to seek jobs normally held by males, advertisements calling for "Dolly Bird" secretaries or "Girl Fridays" would also be banned.

For the first time, women would be given legally-backed equality of opportunity in "three major areas of their lives: employment, training and education," the government promised.

Getting the new legislation through Parliament may prove difficult, however, at that institution still seems to be a hotbed of "male chauvinist" attitudes in spite of the presence of a vociferous handful of female parliamentarians.

There was uproar in the House of Commons early last year when debate on an anti-discrimination bill was adjourned.

Women members of Parliament from both the opposition Labor party and the Conservative government benches roared "shame" and "disgraceful" when Conservative Ronald Bell blocked the bills progress by "talking it out" — speaking on it until the allotted time for debating was up, thus causing it to be adjourned without a vote.

And in the public gallery militant women hissed when a junior minister suggested women were better fitted to "an extension of their domestic role" in jobs.

In 1970 Parliament approved a bill to give women workers equal pay for equal work but since then they have sought more than just equal pay — they have pressed for equal job opportunities too.

The new proposals, which would seem to satisfy their demands, do have some exceptions. Employment Minister Maurice MacMillan has said that certain one-sex jobs — midwifery, mining and the merchant navy — would be exempted.

Nor do they extend to the aristocracy or royalty. The home office says a male heir will continue to take precedence over his sisters when it comes to titles — and to the British throne.

London's Playboy Club also confirmed that the new equality will not extend to the club's bunnies.

"We will definitely not consider men as bunnies," a club spokesman said.

Machine Speaks

OTTAWA (CP) — Computers reading to the blind and talking to the deaf have been developed by two Carleton University researchers.

A clear voice will recite a small vocabulary to the blind while a voice print will be produced on a TV screen for deaf persons.

Reobrt Morris, an engineer, and Jean-Pierre Paillet, a linguist, say the computer system will make books, newspapers and periodicals available to the blind and deaf faster and more cheaply.

The computer will have a working vocabulary of 1,500 common English words stored on a memory disc, with suffixes and prefixes.

The computer will spell words not on the memory disc. It will serve eight persons at a time, providing individual readings for each if so requested. The project has received $86,000 in provincial grants since 1971 plus a 1973 National Research Council grant of $18,000.

Loud Teacher Irks Children

LONDON (CP) — The most unforgivable sin a teacher can commit, according to a survey of British schoolchildren, is to shout.

Shouting and yelling were far and away the main complaints among more than 400 children in the poll recently published in Where, the magazine of the Advisory Centre for Education.

After shouting, the most unpopular characteristics were favoritism, sarcasm and "making clever remarks."

"Nearly all our teachers shout sharply when they tell you off," said one nine-year-old boy. "I don't know why they don't talk softly."

But the survey of primary students at several schools in Manchester and London showed 65 per cent like their teachers. Another 18 per cent dislike teachers and 17 per cent were undecided.

The most surprising thing about the survey, education authorities said, was that it showed children were far more sensitive to teacher's even casual remarks — praise or criticism — than most teachers realize.

One child treasured the memory of a teacher replying, "yes, my darling," while another fondly recalled a teacher saying, "Take 20 points, ducky."

But "come on, boy." remained for years as an unforgotten insult with one lad. Another still resented the remark,

In general the kids rated as first-class teachers who were "bouncy," calm, tactful and "make you have a little laugh now and then."

A bad teacher is "cross and bossy," "dull and boring," and has pet pupils.

In general comments many children said they thought students should be permitted to write reports on their teachers.

"I think if they can tell our fathers and mothers, why can't we tell their parents?" one boy wrote.

"My idea of a perfect teacher is one who never shouts and always talks to you," said an eight-year-old girl. And one boy wrote:

Hospital Delay Often Fatal

LONDON (Reuter) — An authority on family planning says women in Britain are dying unnecessarily because abortions are not carried out early enough.

"And the simplest method (vacuum aspiration) is not used," said Dr. Malcolm Potts, medical director of the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

"I am just an old-fashioned doctor who does not like killing people . . . We are in the steam age over abortions compared with America," he wrote in the magazine New Humanist, published Tuesday.

Britain, with its liberal legislation, has become something of an abortion centre of Western Europe. But Potts critizized the complicated procedure of booking women into hospital, often involving delays of weeks for a bed.

He said the operation is more dangerous here than in New York "partly because doctors are not practised enough in carrying out abortions, and also because this country is backward in its methods and does not perform them early enough."

Vacuum aspiration, which he said was the best method, must be carried out in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy.

"I would like to see abortions carried out within the first 10 weeks of pregnancy, with 98 per cent of the patients outpatients and going home after two or three hours," Potts wrote.

PKU Moms Urged To Adopt Children

MONTREAL (CP) — Women with phenylketonuria (PKU) — an inherited body chemistry disease — should choose sterilization and adopt children if they want to become mothers, a Saskatchewan radiologist told about 1,000 of his colleagues Monday.

He said the alternative is to bear a retarded child.

Dr. Stuart Houston of the University of Saskatchewan was speaking at a convention here of the American Roentgen Ray Society.

The person with the disease must be treated early in life with a diet of foods that are low in phenylanaline content.

Houston said children of women with PKU will be retarded because the high level of phenylanaline in the mother's body causes brain damage to the child she carries.

He said x-rays of these children show "definite evidence of retarded brain growth."

Among the women Houston has studied over the last five years, one mother had given birth to eight retarded children.

"All the brain damage to the children happened while the foetus was in the mother's womb," he said. "The babies end up more damaged than the mother herself."

While males will not directly produce retarded children, he said, females harm any children they carry because of their abnormal chemistry.

He said statistics show there are about 10 females born annually in Canada with the deficiency. The abnormality can be discovered by a premarital blood test.

"Ideally, the woman with the disease should opt for sterilization and adopt children," Houston said.

He said Saskatchewan is the first province to test for PKU in the blood test, and he suggested other provinces begin screening for the deficiency if only to save the state money.

Old Home Unearthed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Archeologists have made two 5,000-year-old finds at opposite ends of Israel revealing the existence of a farming community in the north and confirming trade links between Egypt and Canaan in the south.

A house from about 3,500 B.C. was excavated in the occupied Golan Heights, containing a small house God made of basalt the first of its kind ever found in its original resting place.

Other finds included storage jars, basalt bowls, mortars, pestles and agricultural tools.

Scientists say the fragment confirms the existence of trade links between Egypt and Canaan, which had only been suspected since the discovery of Egyptian tools at the same site in 1962.

Plastic Smoke Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Government officials are investigating the fire hazards of various foam plastics in home products — particularly furniture — following complaints of smoke suffocation danger from fire-prevention authorities.

Provincial fire officials say some foam plastics ignite easily, burn quickly and give off a thick smoke in which persons would quickly suffocate, James Black, director of the products safety branch of the consumer affairs department, said today in an interview.

However, the investigation was in the preliminary stage and it was not known whether legislation would be required.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By WILLIAM WELCH

Since everybody's normal, around-the-clock heart-beats are set off about 70 times each minute by an electrical impulse generated in the right upper chamber of the heart itself, it is not suprising that biomedical engineers considered it possible to provide an artificial firing impulse, when your own mechanism does not work properly. That is exactly what a battery-powered heart pacemaker does.

Wires are channeled into the cavity of the heart through a vein under the collar-bone and are anchored to the muscle wall of the heart. Outside the body, the near ends of the wires are attached to a battery. The battery provides the power for a pulse generator, which transmits electrical impulses rhythmically to the heart muscle, and the muscle responds just as it would to the normal stimulus.

Until recently pacemakers delivered a fixed number of beats per minute, say 70 or 72, but now "demand" pacemakers are more commonly used. These allow the heart to respond to its own impulses and the pacemaker takes over only when the normal heart-rate falls below a predetermined rate.

When a pacemaker is necessary for only a brief period to tide over a temporarily unreliable pacing mechanism in the course of an acute heart attack, the battery is worn in a sling outside the body. When a permanent pacemaker is needed because the damaged pacing mechanism will not right itself, the power pack is sewn under the skin below the collar-bone. It is about the size of a pack of playing cards, and those who have them say that they quickly forget it is there.

The batteries last somewhere between two and three years. Failure of the pulse-generator can be predicted by special tests, best performed in a pacemaker clinic, where the simple procedure of replacing the batteries can be done well in advance of failure of the power.

New batteries, with a lifetime of eight years, are on the horizon and nuclear powered pacemakers with an essentially unlimited lifetime have been implanted in a small number of patients.

The first pacemaker was implanted 15 years ago in the chest of a 38-year-old Swedish engineer, who was nearly immobilized with fainting spells, and threatened with sudden death due to an irreparably damaged conduction system. Today, he lives a normal life, traveling as much as six months each year, in his capacity as head of an electrical consulting firm.

Since that epochal moment, tens of thousands of pacemakers have been implanted in the faltering hearts of patients of all ages, all over the Western world. In community hospitals, as well as research centres, the indications for artificial pacing of the heart are well established.

Beeton Cookbook Still Lively Reading

elizabeth forbes

I've just been entrusted with a book the owner says is one of her most prized possessions.

It's an original copy of the Mary Beeton book on cooking and household management, first printed 113 years ago and, in a revise edition, still a best seller today.

This astonishing book is a delightful work, well worth reading for amusement and for an insight into the times in which it was written.

It includes chapters on everything from natural history of fishes to legal memoranda, the rearing and management of children, routine household ways and work, diseases of infancy and childhood.

Prices are given that in today's context, would make you weep. lamb chops were 25 cents a pound, and a beef-steak and kidney pie containing two pounds of steak and two kidneys, sufficient for six persons, only cost 60 cents.

Much of the book contains advice that could still be applicable today.

At the time it was written servants were common place. And Mrs. Beeton said: "early rising is one of the most essential qualities which enter into good household management, as it is not only the parent of health, but of innumerable other advantages.

"Indeed, when a mistress is an early riser it is almost certain her house will be orderly and well-mannered.

"On the contrary, if she remains in bed till a late hour, then the domestics, who, as we have before observed, invariably partake somewhat of their mistress's character, will surely become sluggards."

Thi piece of advice is true, even in these servantless days in most homes.

If you want to "revive cut flowers after packing" one cannot do better than follow Mrs. Beeton's advice — "plunge the stems into boiling water, and by the time the water is cold the flowers will have revived. Then cut afresh the ends of the stems and keep them in fresh cold water."

Her recipe for cleaning looking glasses (mirrors, to you) "sponge the surface with equal parts of gin and water; then dust with powder blue and an old silk handkerchief" and the direction to clean silk or ribbons by rubbing with a mixture of half a pint of gin, half a pound of honey, half a pound of soft soap and half a pint of water, were obviously written before England's Lord Chancellor imposed taxes on gin.

In the section headed "The Mistress" there are reminders of a more leisurely age. When paying morning calls, for instance "a lady may remove her boa or neckerchief, but neither her shawl nor bonnet."

Speaking of meals, dinner, she says, being the grand meal of the day, is of considerable importance. "The appetite of the over-worked man of business, or statesman, or dweller in towns, whose occupations are exciting and jaded, require stimulations.

"Men are now so well-served at their clubs, well-ordered taverns, and dining houses . . . in order to compete with the attractions of these places a wife must be thoroughly acquainted with the theory and practice of cookery, as well as conversant with all other arts or making and keeping a comfortable home.

"To invite a person to your home is to take charge of his happiness . . . let the temperature of the dining room be about 68 degrees.

"The mistress of the house should always be certain the coffee is excellent; whilst the master should be answerable for the quality of his wines and liquers."

Isabella Mary Mayson was born in London in 1836, a year before Queen Victoria was crowned. She grew up in a household of 21 children, some being step-sisters and brothers.

In 1856 she married Samuel Orchart Beeton, a go-ahead young publisher who was already successful and eligible.

Their first son was born when Isabella was twenty-one, dying three monhs later.

In an effort to keep herself and her mind occupied, she then threw herself into writing the book.

Friends tried to dissuade her— "Cookery is a science which is only learned by long experience and years of study, which, of course, you have not had," reproved one.

Nothing daunted, Isabella went ahead. Hundreds of recipes which poured in from other friends who approved, were tested in her kitchen. "Nothing is to go into the book untried," she said.

She insisted, too, that her main motivation in writing the book, was the discomfort and suffering which she had seen brought upon men and women by household mismanagement.

"I have always thought there is no more fruitful source of family discomfort than a housewife's badly cooked dinner and untidy ways."

Throughout Mrs. Beeton's book you find this kind of common sense, much of which still holds good today.

I'm going to tell you a little more about it in my next column.

dear abby

Caveat Emptor

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year-old man whose wife died three years ago. I am going with a 51-year-old widow. She is a high class, attractive woman whose husband left her as well off financially as I am. (Maybe better.) I am not the only man she goes with, and I see other women, but we both see more of each other because we seem to enjoy each other's company more. (Yes, it is a "love" affair, too.)

This woman is always suggesting that I buy her expensive presents. I never figured her for a gold digger, mainly because she can buy anything she wants, but she insists that I buy her things. I haven't bought her anything yet, but I am on the verge.

She's never bought me anything, but then, why should she?

Part of me says, "Buy her something to please her," but part of me says, "Why should you? Don't be a chump." What do you say? — Not Tight — Just Careful

DEAR NOT: "Why should you? Don't be a chump." (P.S. If she's no gold digger, she shouldn't act like one.)

DEAR ABBY: This is just like waking up in the middle of a nightmare! We have been married for two years and are now in the process of moving. Yesterday I found nine handwritten "thank you" notes I had written for wedding gifts received shortly after we were married. They had fallen behind a desk drawer.

I feel two inches high, knowing that these people have never been thanked for their wedding presents. They are probably wondering what kind of manners I have. Or do you think they have forgotten about it by now?

What should I do? — Mortified.

DEAR MORTIFIED: It's hundred to one they have not forgotten. Better late than never. Send the original "thank you" note, explaining exactly what happened. They'll understand.

DEAR ABBY: I am 21, married, and have a 14-month-old son whom I adore. Now you'd think with all I have to do I'd be busy enough to keep me satisfied, but I'm not. I keep a clean house, cook three good meals a day, and my laundry is up-to-date.

I want to really be somebody and do something besides housework day in and day out. I'd even be satisfied with a factory job but nobody will hire me. I think it's because I tell the truth on the job applications. I quit school in the 9th grade, which was the dumbest thing I ever did. Now I realize it, but I can't turn back the clock.

Do they have schools for dropouts like me? I want so much to get my high school diploma. I know when my son gets older he will be ashamed of his mother because she didn't even finish 9th grade.

When people use big words and say things I don't understand, I just keep quiet because I'm too ashamed to let on that I don't know what they're talking about.

Please help me, Abby. Failure

DEAR YOUNG WOMAN: I refuse to call you "Failure" because "Failures" are satisfied with their lot, and you are not. You can get your high school diploma through an adult education program. Get in touch with a counsellor at your nearest public high school.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was in a drug store when a woman, who appeared to be about 61, came in grumbling about her "old age."

The druggist, a good friend of mine, pointed to me, and said: "This old gent is 87, and he seems to be doing all right."

The woman asked me how I did it, and I replied: "I don't smoke or drink, I attend church regularly and never fool around with more than one woman at a time."

She looked me in the eye, and asked: "Mister, what do you do for fun?"

I told her that I wandered through graveyards and copied unusual inscriptions from the tombstones. It's true, but I'm sure she didn't believe me. L.L.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J. A. H., M.D.: The next time I come in for my checkup, I'm going to weigh you, doctor! For your health's sake, watch that girth-control. So many people love and need you.

Free For The Asking

By HARRIET HART

You can watch grouse throughout the year, but right now this can be a particularly fascinating and informative pursuit. If you search carefully through the woods, you will likely find many traces of ruffed grouse, if they are there at all.

The four-page leaflet Grouse tells you that the ruffed grouse, also called a partridge, is common throughout most of Canada.

At mating time hens are wooed by the males with a drumming sound. The Indians called the ruffed grouse "the carpenter bird," because they thought it drummed by beating its wings against a log. Actually, the sound is produced as the bird beats its wings rapidly against the air.

Women in Space Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has started studies aimed at eventually putting women in space.

Announcement of the experiments, already underway in California, comes only weeks after a women's magazine, Ms., accused the agency of sex discrimination in its selection of astronauts.

There never has been a United States woman astronaut. The Soviet Union's Valentina Tereshkova spent 70 hours and 50 minutes in space in 1963.

The California tests are the first ever conducted by NASA on the suitability of women in space. However, NASA officials have been saying for three years they hope to put a woman aboard the space shuttle flights scheduled to start in 1978.

The five-week NASA studies, involving 12 U.S. Air Force flight nurses, started last Monday at the Amers Research Centre in Mountain View, Calif.

Scientists hope to determine how well women withstand the low gravitational forces of re-entry and the tendency of the blood to pool in the legs.

They also will study specific changes in the body induced by weightlessness.

Coloring Food Needless With Thoughtful Selection

By HILDA BEASTALL

The appearance of food is carried to ridiculous extremes if we must add artificial colorings to natural pale colors just for eye appeal. The thoughtful combining of naturally colored foods is appetite stimulating if each color added fulfills a definite purpose in the meal.

This may sound like a session in hair splitting but it is aimed at being practical.

Just now with tomatoes red ripe on garden plants and locally vine-ripened fruits also available in stores, ample opportunity exists for using these in attractive thick slices on green salads.

If you have grown the deep golden tomato Orange Queen, alternate the colored slices for fine effect.

Failing the golden tomato you may be growing the orange colored Summer Crookneck squash. Thin slices of this complete with its tender outer skin and young centre pulp and seeds are just as attractive and easy to digest as tomato though different nutritionally.

And by the way, the more quickly grown and ripened your tomatoes are, the easier they are for most people to thoroughly enjoy. Orange Queen particularly is less sharp in its flavor. Early Fireball is a close second, and ripens weeks earlier.

When using green zucchini squash as a base for the complete supper omelet given here previously, alternate the slices in the pan with Yellow Crookneck for a fine appearance.

Red tomato diced and scattered on top of cheese casseroles add more value to the total dish than pimento, and you can safely use more of it.

The same with green garnishes. Instead of using a sprig of parsley which most folks leave on the edge of the plate, chop a quantity and scatter over the food so that it is mixed and eaten.

Be sure the parsley is fresh and crisp and not a limp old piece unfit for eating. Many other green leafy plants can be used as garnish, including young violet leaves, chickweed, winter cress, chervil — all available during winter in pots or tubs on balconies or decks.

Purple or red cabbage, alternating with green cabbage and both contrasting with creamy yellow Buttercrunch lettuce are a ready-made modern color picture for a salad. Slice the cabbage finely, sprinkle with lemon juice containing a little clear honey, to preserve the colors and adding a little extra Vitamin C and calcium.

String beans, cauliflower, and beets make an attractive threesome as a hot vegetable plate.

Whole small orange colored carrots, steamed lightly, contrast well in color with young green beanpods and a mound of whole new potatoes boiled in their skins. Use plenty of margarine with this vegetable plate; or serve bacon diced and cooked quickly in a pan, tossing in the cooked potatoes for a few minutes before serving.

Food Life Rules Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal proposals and regulations on dating of fresh foods and labelling of pre-packaged goods were made public last weekend by the government.

Interested parties, including companies and consumers, will be able to make their views known to the government on the proposed regulations for two months.

Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray announced "open date marking" proposals that will apply to all perishable foods except fresh fruit and vegetables.

Under the proposals, dealers will have to label dates after which food is not expected to maintain peak wholesomeness, palatability and nutritional value.

Fish Obstacle To Be Cleared

DUNCAN — A big log jam obstructing fish ladders at Skutz Falls on the Cowichan River, 15 miles west of Duncan, will be cleared this week, says Ed Armstrong, chief fisheries officer for the Duncan district.

He said the department has been aware of the problem for some time but had trouble getting an operator and a proper machine to clear the obstruction.

"The jam-clearing operation will begin within a few days," he said.

Province Number Eleven?

By BILL BEAN
Thunder Bay Times-News

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The creation of a new province in Northern Ontario is a favorite chestnut of oldtimers, but none take it too seriously.

This summer, a man from North Bay has added some weight to the old story.

Ed Deibel has organized the New Province Committee of Northern Ontario and, in a oneman crusade, has been spreading the good word of "New Ontario" across the northern portion of the province.

He hopes that before or by July 1, 1975, the committee will have 25,000 members. That figure is what is termed as "a substantial number" by the provincial government. Mr. Deibel hopes that with that number he can put pressure on the province into holding a plebiscite on the issue of separation.

"Getting a plebiscite is the sole and only purpose of the New Province Committee," he says.

SEES NEW PROVINCE

After that the future is a bit hazy, but he envisages the gradual formation of the new province. The "smart" and professional men of Northern Ontario will come out of the woodwork to help create the new province, he says.

That will come later. What is important now is obtaining the plebiscite, and to do that, Mr. Deibel is travelling across Northern Ontario attempting to whip up support.

He started the New Province Committee July 18, opening an office in North Bay where he is a motel operator. In August, he embarked on his campaign. He has visited Timmins, Cochrane, Massey and Thunder Bay. By the first week in October, he also will have met people in Dryden, Red Lake, Kenora, Fort Frances, Atikokan, Nipigon, Geraldton, Manitouwadge, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury and North Bay.

At each stop he talks to local politicians, businessmen and just plain folks trying to pick up members and leave behind a working sub-committee that will begin its own membership drives.

There now are members in 19 Northern Ontario communities. There are sub-committees in five. Mr. Deibel wants to have 158 sub-committees operating by 1975.

PICKS UP SUPPORT

But he is picking up support. He hasn't had a meeting yet where someone hasn't been interested in the concept of a new province, he says.

The aims of the New Province Committee are largely economic.

"We want to regulate our economy," says Ed Deibel. "We want to see 75 per cent of the industry in Northern Ontario Canadian-owned and 25 per cent of the profits reinvested in the new province.

"Northern Ontario becoming the 11th province of Canada could be the industrial heart of Canada. Northern Ontario has 20 billion tons of iron ore— enough for 200 years."

Central industrial complexes could be developed for major centres while smaller industries might be developed in smaller communities.

"I don't care if it only employs 10 persons, at least it would be a start to develop the North and every village and town would be a part of that development."

A lot of towns and villages are interested. When Mr. Deibel began his project, he decided the limits of the new province should extend across Northern Ontario from Manitoba to Quebec, and south from Hudson Bay to the city of North Bay.

SOME WANT IN

But some citizens of Parry Sound became so agitated at the thought of being left with southern Ontario that they wrote demanding the boundary be extended.

The seeming neglect of the North by the provincial government is an added stimulus for many to join the new province group.

QUOTES REPORT

One report Mr. Deibel quotes freely notes that from 1962 to 1972, some 120,000 people left Northern Ontario—an annual migration of 12,000 persons.

The provincial government has no need for Northern Ontario, says Mr. Deibel. "There's 16 provincial members in Northern Ontario, and the Conservatives have four of them." The other 101 members of the legislature come from Southern Ontario.

A poorly-developed tourist trade, neglect of historic sites, as well as little secondary industry are targets of Mr. Deibel that the province seems to be trying to remedy. The premier and his cabinet ministers are making the occasional handshaking forays into the North— and are even announcing policy there.

"I hope the people aren't satisfied with these concessions," says Mr. Deibel.

There's something appealing about forming a new province— getting a new start.

"We have to start fresh and make new laws," he says. "Queen's Park (the provincial government) can't cut its strings with the industrial complex, but we can."

Quit Smoking? Here's Diet Help To Beat No-Cigarette Hungries

By PETER MOSLEY

LONDON (Reuter) — Ex-smokers now have a diet book to help them through those agonizing days when over-eating seems the only way to forget about cigarettes.

"I think the main reason for people going back to the dangerous habit is because they find they get fat when they don't smoke," says author Dr. Philip Lawson. He calls these turncoats "the I'd rather smoke myself to death than eat myself into the grave brigade."

Scientifically, there is good evidence that ex-smokers gain weight rapidly and face special hardships in trying to diet.

A study among steelworkers in South Wales showed that lifelong non-smokers over the age of 40 were on average almost 13 pounds heavier than smokers.

But Dr. Lawson notes in The Ex-Smokers Diet Book that even the smokers are, on average, 15 pounds overweight at this age.. And he adds bluntly: "Fat smokers die even more frequently than fat non-smokers."

The simple fact is that smoking one cigarette can abolish "hunger pain" contractions of the stomach for anything from 15 minutes to an hour.

Then there's the psychology of smoking, especially the bit that says its a hangover from infancy with the cigarette (or pipe or cigar) serving as a substitute nipple.

Lawson, who gave up smoking 15 years ago, finds this type of argument absurd. But he adds: "The inhalation of the smoke mimics, physiologically, the process of swallowing and can be viewed, from the psychological standpoint anyway, as a form of eating."

Suddenly, food is exciting again.

How to cope? Lawson says a lot depends on just what type of smoker you were. He cites a five-category list drawn up by researchers of the London Institute of Psychiatry:

"Psycho-social" smokers, who do not inhale, are simply smoking for appearance—often for the first time. They should have no weight problem on giving up. But Dr. Lawson has a statistic especially for the first-timers: A teen-ager only needs to smoke once to have a 70 per cent chance of smoking for the next 40 years.

The "indulgent" smoker smokes only when relaxing, usually not regularly, gets pleasure from the "business" of smoking—the actual feel of the cigarette in the mouth. So the ex-indulgent smoker should seek out fiddly foods like unpeeled prawns, kebabs or snails to keep him busy and fulfilled.

The third main type of smoker is the "tranquillizer", basically a nervous, self-conscious person who uses cigarettes to relieve tension and anxiety. "Denied tobacco, he will often turn to alcohol as a sedative in a stressful situation."

What the ex-tranquillizer smoker needs is bulky (though low-calorie) foods. He should fill up on clear soup, salad, fruit and plenty of cheese. Use the cheese early in the meal to act as a stomach filler and fend off the hunger pains. Try pausing 10 minutes between courses, too; that can help cut down total intake.

And if he still needs to drink, dry wines like hock and claret are not too fattening—in moderation, of course.

The "stimulation" smoker is seeking a quick shot of adrenalin, released by the nicotine. More sleep and more energy foods like oranges, eggs and watercress will give him vitality nature's way.

Finally, the real hard-core smokers, called "addictives". They are hooked on smoking and suffer acute withdrawal symptoms when they stop.

When they do manage to beat the craving, they turn to eating and, having sacrificed their cigarettes, are most reluctant to surrender any of its pleasures.

When they finally see the need to lose weight, Lawson says, they should seek their doctor's approval to go on a three-day fast, as a starter. After that, they can launch into a regular, balanced diet.

For those moments of weakness when the ex-smoker feels close to reaching for the weed, he lists these cigarette "substitutes:"

A cocktail onion of a spoonful of vinegar pickle; a half-inch cube of cheese, the stronger the better; a small piece of fruit liquidized and mixed with crushed ice; one small, extra strong peppermint; a glass of cold water; a teaspoon of French dressing or cod-liver oil with Worcester sauce.

SHRINE CONTEST WINNER

GUERRILLAS TEENAGE REBELS

PORT OF SPAIN (Reuter) — An upsurge of violent urban guerrilla activity in Trinidad and Tobago has left officials wondering why it should happen in what is basically a black, independent and developing country.

The problem was highlighted recently when police shot down 18-year-old Beverley Jones, a member of a guerrilla band who for the last six months has harassed people and baffled the public with attacks on banks, stores and police stations.

Beverley died in a hail of submachine-gun fire from a police detachment which had been sent into the hills to capture the guerrillas after the murder of a policeman in August.

At her funeral, black militant leaders turned up chanting slogans and one group performed an African tribal funeral dance.

Despite this, there is growing evidence that it may be a sort of generation gap, rather than racial or economic friction, which is responsible for the upsurge in guerrilla activity in Trinidad and Tobago.

Of this southern Caribbean island's population of one million, over half are under 19.

The huge, restless reserve of youth is strongly tested by unemployment, boredom and lack of full opportunities for further education. The guerrillas could be a violent manifestation of the political awareness among them.

The government too is feeling the strain of the generation gap. Prime Minister Eric Williams, 61, has just accepted the resignation of his 40-year-old Attorney-General Karl Hudson-Phillips — the man who looked as though he might inject young blood into the ruling People's National Movement leadership. Hudson-Phillips was challenging the position of chairman held by Francis Prevatt, 62, but withdrew his nomination following the split with Dr. Williams.

★ ★ ★

A police official said the guerrillas "are just a bunch of criminals and should not benefit from any of the heroic overtones of the political struggle."

Police feeling was especially bitter after a constable was shot at point-blank range in his patrol car in a killing blamed on the guerrillas.

Pensioners Prod Prices

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The National Pensioners and Senior Citizens Federation has asked Ottawa to investigate the food processing and distributing industry.

A resolution passed at the group's annual convention Tuesday said the federal government should formulate "a pricing policy on basic services and consumer goods such as the cost of land and housing.

"Then food processing and distributing should be investigated, the findings publicized and, where justified, prices rolled back."

The resolution was considerably milder than the six resolutions it combined. They originally asked for controls on rent, wages, profits and interest rates.

The resolutions committee chairman, Charles MacDonald of the Community Service and Retired Workers department of the United Auto Workers, said inflation was caused primarily by prices, not wages.

He added that non-professional workers had to "sell" their wage increases to the public while dentists and lawyers "just come out of the back room and announce that tomorrow the price of their services is going up by so much."

The two-day convention also endorsed the concept of a national identification card for senior citizens which would qualify them for discounts on various goods and services.

The federal government's New Horizons program for the elderly was criticized as being inadequately funded when compared with the Local Initiatives Program for younger people.

Tom Alsbury, former mayor of Vancouver and chairman of Pensioners For Action, attributed increases in old-age pensions and income supplements to the fact that the ruling Liberal Party is a minority government.

The mine closed in December, 1971, because of low molybdenum prices but prices now have risen. No definite date has been set for the re-opening pending issuance of a government pollution permit.

Growers Welcome Fruit Report

KELOWNA (CP) — Recommendations of the Hudson Report on the British Columbia Fruit Industry, have met with widespread industry support.

Hans Rhenisch, president of United Fruit Growers, welcomed the report, particularly a recommendation that a plebiscite be held among growers on the question of retention of a central selling agency.

"It is an excellent suggestion, Rhenisch said Tuesday.

"A vote would go 60 per cent in favor of the UFG."

But a director of the British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association, Ernie Malen of Kelowna, said he felt a plebiscite would favor B.C. Tree Fruits, the existing central selling agency.

"It's something that has to come, and I think it will be successful," Malen said.

"Growers are going to make sure they don't lose control over their industry."

Rhenisch took exception to one part of the report in which the author lashed out at breakaway groups which are attempting to use the marketing system "as an umbrella for their own private profit at the expense of the other growers."

"It is absolutely unthinkable to suggest we are doing this for ourselves. We are representing all fruit growers and serve all consumers in British Columbia," Rhenisch said.

Granville Mall Gets $3.4M Nod

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $3.4 million plan for turning Granville Street, the main thoroughfare in Vancouver's downtown business district, into a mall by July 1, 1974 was approved Tuesday by city council.

The first phase of the program calls for turning a six-block section of Granville between Nelson and Hastings into a mall on which the present six traffic lanes would be restricted to pedestrians and public transit.

It calls for widening and decorating the sidewalks, street lighting, and planting of trees.

Later bus shelters, street furniture, seating facilities, fountains and other amenities would be provided.

Council approved $3,250,000 for the mall itself, plus $164,000 for storm sewers, what would be needed whether or not the mall was built and will be budgeted for under another account.

Mayor Art Phillips said he believes the cost of the first stage of the program will be about $2.7 million. Ald. Geoff Massey, chairman of the mall committee, said the second stage would cost $1 million at the most.

Phillips said it would not be "unreasonable" for Granville merchants to pay one-third of the first phase. Council authorized the mayor and Ald. Massey to negotiate with the merchants on equitable cost sharing, as well as to talk with federal and provincial officials about financial assistance.

Bill Curtis, deputy city engineer, said sewer work will begin within a few days and that Granville will be shut down completely from late January into the spring.

One or two lanes may be closed during a portion of the Christmas season, Curtis said.

Activists Blamed For Discord

VANCOUVER (CP) — Political activists representing a minority of tenants are harassing apartment owners and creating discord, the president of the Greater Vancouver Apartment Owners' Association said Tuesday night.

Bruce Innes, president of the association, called for city council to modify its proposals to Victoria for a strengthened rental grievance accommodation board, emasculated by a recent court decision.

Landlords should not be required to give grounds for evictions, Innes said. He also said the reasons for evictions should be expanded so that the landlord would not be restricted in providing accommodation for the majority.

Evictions should be permitted on such grounds as tenants not having compatible lifestyles with other tenants, keeping animals without permission, causing fires carelessly, being alcoholics or mentally disturbed and leaving children unattended, he said.

Michener as Governor-General
A Difficult Act to Follow

OTTAWA (CP) — Roland Michener will be a tough act to follow as the Governor-General, an appointment that involves, as one observer put it, "mastery of the art of saying something that pleases everyone and affects no one but which needs to be said well."

Gov.-Gen. Michener, whose term as vice-regal head of state already has been extended past the normal five years, is due to retire Nov. 30. Now 73, he first was appointed in April, 1967, and his term was extended by a year in April, 1972. Last April, it was lengthened by a further seven months.

The search for a successor, the 21st governor-general, has been on for some time—a task that involves the prime minister, cabinet and, ultimately, the Queen.

Primarily a pomp-and-ceremony job, the role demands not only the unerring touch of a seasoned diplomat, but also the ability to be the complete host, an encyclopedic knowledge of Canada and fluent bilingualism.

Possible contenders are limited.

External affairs experts on a speculative list include Leo Cadieux, ambassador to France, Marcel Cadieux, ambassador to the United States, and George Ignatieff, former ambassador to the United Nations.

OTHERS POSSIBLE

Other possibles are Lucien Lamoureux, the independent MP for Stormont-Dundas, Speaker of the House of Commons for nearly eight years; and Lt.-Gen. Jean-Victor Allard, the now-retired chief of the Canadian Forces staff.

"It's possible the successor knows already," a source close to Michener said this week.

"But it's also possible his term will be extended again."

The selection machinery usually winds up with Prime Minister Trudeau recommending a candidate to the Queen. "Then again," the source said, "it's possible Trudeau could propose two choices to Her Majesty, leaving the final selection to her."

George Ignatieff, 60, is seen by some observers as having the inside track.

A dark horse, he is neither English nor French and some observers say it's time for a change. Of the governors-general born in Canada, Vincent Massey, 1952-59, was of English extraction; Gen. Georges P. Vanier, 1959-67, French; and Michener, English.

Fluently multilingual, Ignatieff speaks English, French, Russian. Tall and distinguished looking, he is married with two children and can draw on a wealth of experience that includes diplomatic postings in Britain, Europe and the United States.

SON OF A SHOEMAKER

Another favorite is Leo Cadieux, 65, ambassador to France since 1970. A native of St. Jerome, Que., he is a shoemaker's son who has been a poet, a journalist, a book publisher, a court official and a politician. He is married and has a nine-year-old son.

Cadieux is described as a friendly man who gets on well with just about anybody.

Marcel, his 58-year-old counterpart in Washington, is no relation.

Marcel Cadieux, born in Montreal, is blunt-spoken, given to quick judgments and unabashedly enthusiastic about his work and life in general. He has been posted in Britain, Europe and Indo-China.

Cadieux is married and has two children, aged 12 and 16.

Lamoureaux, commons Speaker since 1966, is largely discounted, mainly on the lack of experience other than in the House, to which he was first elected in 1962.

Married with four children, the 53-year-old Ottawa native, however, has been rumored at least to be on the list of candidates.

Gen. Allard, 59, was born in Ste. Monique de Nicolet, Que. His career included 14 months as commander of the 25th Infantry Brigade in Korea in the early 1950s and nearly three years as commander of the 4th division of the British Army of the Rhine in Germany, an appointment by the Queen.

DREAM HOME BUILT ON WRONG SITE

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — For eight years Carlos Gonzales saved to buy his dream home only to discover the $52,000 house was built on the wrong lot.

"All I own is a vacant lot with nothing on it," Gonzales, 27, said Tuesday. "This is a nightmare. My dream house has vanished."

The Miami barber said he moved into the house three weeks ago with his wife, Mirta, and their three children.

The next day, Gonzales said he received a letter from the lawyer for Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Rose of Miami informing him his house belonged on the lot next door.

"My wife burst into tears," Gonzales said. "I laughed at first but now I don't think it is funny."

Max Puyanic, the Roses' lawyer, said that under Florida law the Roses own the house.

"But we are going to try and work out some settlement," he said. "This sort of thing doesn't happen but once in a blue moon."

He said the settlement would involve swapping the lots but Gonzales would have to pay the Roses damages and then try to collect his losses from the builder.

Ex-Priest, Nun, Expecting

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Anti-war activists Phillip Berrigan and his wife Elizabeth McAlister said Tuesday they are expecting a child in April.

Berrigan, who was excommunicated from the Catholic Church for breaking his priest's vows by marrying, said he and his wife — a former nun — plan to raise the child in the church.

He said he and his wife still feel they are very much a part of the church "and also want our child to be."

The couple said they have no preference about the child's sex. "As long as the baby's healthy, we don't care," Berrigan said.

Cartier Bids for Richard's Token

PARIS — If a 69-carat pear-shaped diamond is no longer among Elizabeth Taylor's best friends, then Cartier will be happy to buy it back for $2 million.

Richard Burton gave the gem to Miss Taylor in 1972 as a 40th birthday present and the $2 million offer represents about twice the price he paid Cartier for the stone.

A spokesman for Cartier, one of Paris' best known jewelry dealers, said the offer was being made because of reports that the gem might be a point of contention in a divorce settlement.

Engraved in the gold mounting are the words: "Eternal love til death."

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI announced today the retirement of Archbishop Michael O'Neill of Regina, 75, for reasons of age.

The new archbishop was born in Winnipeg in 1930.

He was ordained in 1956, and since then has been vice-chancellor of the curia of the archdiocese of Winnipeg.

CHICAGO — A machinist who spent three years in prison for a murder police now believe another man committed was freed Tuesday. He said he will sue the state for his imprisonment.

Wilbur McDonald, 33, dressed in a double breasted black suit, listened calmly as criminal court judge Frank Wilson set aside his 100 to 150-year prison sentence.

"I wish you the best of luck," the judge said.

LINCOLN, Neb. — The Nebraska pardon board will hold a hearing Oct. 30 on the latest freedom bid of Carll Ann Fugate, 30, who has spent half her life in prison as the accomplice of mass murderer Charles Starkweather.

The board voted 2-1 Tuesday in favor of granting Miss Fugate a hearing. Gov. J. J. Exon and secretary of state Allen Beermann voted in favor of accepting the case and setting it for hearing, while Attorney General Clarence Meyer voted against consideration.

TEL AVIV — Defence Minister Moshe Dayan has called for the creation of a desert metropolis of hundreds of thousands of Jews in the occupied Sinai Peninsula seized by Israel in the 1967 Middle East War.

Dayan told desert settlers in the Sinai he envisioned the Israeli port city would someday outstrip in population the nearby Gaza Strip, which as 370,000 Arab residents.

NEW YORK — The Broadway stage debut of film star Tony Curtis has been cancelled because of critical pans and poor attendance during the out-of-town previews of The One Night Stand, in which he appeared.

Producer David Merrick closed the comedy Saturday in Philadelphia. A management spokesman declined to estimate the investment loss.

The play was to have had its premiere Oct. 14.

STRATFORD DIRECTOR CHOSEN

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — British director Robin Phillips has been appointed artistic director of the Stratford Festival, it was announced today.

He will assume his position early in the new year, working closely with present artistic director Jean Gasgon, departing at the end of the 1974 season.

Phillips will remain in England until January to honor current commitments.

As part of his duties, he will tour theatres across Canada and the United States.

He has gained international recognition through his work with the Royal Shakespeare and Chichester Festival companies as well as for directing productions in Lonron's West End and on Broadway.

Among his acting credits, Phillips had distinguished himself as Wilfred Desert, in The Forsyte Saga, and as Constantin in The Seagull.

He played the lead role in the film of Evelyn Waugh's Decline and Fall, starred as David in David Copperfield and made a horror film, Tales from the Crypt, with Sir Ralph Richardson.

Gastown Crackdown Requested

A government backbencher Tuesday asked Attorney-General Alex Macondlad to have the Liquor Board crack down on hotels and beer parlors in Vancouver's Gastown and skid road areas.

Emery Barnes (NDP — Vancouver Centre) mentioned no names, but he called some of the hotels "enemies of the people" because they allow hard liquor in beverage rooms drug dealing and knife fights.

"They're enemies of the people. These are not friends of the people who are permitting all kinds of things going on in their pubs. It's deplorable."

He said the board is going to have to buckle down on some of the operators of hotels where there are "fights galore, people carrying knives and smoking opium pipes.

Accused 'Proud'

KHARTOUM, Sudan (Reuter) — One of eight Palestinian Black September guerrillas who went before a magistrate's court Tuesday on murder charges told a crowded courtroom: "We have done our duty. We are proud of the revolutionary work we have done." The eight men are accused of murdering three foreign diplomats, two Americans and a Belgian, in the Saudi Arabian embassy here. The hearing was postponed to Nov. 13.

U.K. 'Goose Being Plucked'

LONDON (CP) — Britain's automobile industry, once the proud flag-carrier of the country's export drive, is lurching through perhaps the worst crisis in its 70-year history.

Chronically prone to labor troubles, the industry has suffered so many this year that United States auto companies with big stakes in Britain have issued bitter criticisms and in one case — Chrysler — threatened to pull out altogether.

On top of that, Britain this year for the first time became a net importer of cars — buying more from the world than she sells. Japanese firms in particular are cleaning up with their competitively priced and readily available models.

Lord Stokes, chairman of British Leyland Motor Corp., last week called for government restrictions on the import of such cars "until we can get our house in order."

POLICY BLAMED

"We are sitting back like a fat goose being plucked," he said. But Stokes later conceded that British Leyland, which makes the popular Minis as well as the high-powered Rover and Jaguar range, had been placing quantity ahead of quality in its priorities.

Leyland recently had a vigorous shakeup in its board room resulting in the sudden departure of Managing Director George Turnbull. Management at Ford's main British plant in Dagenham meanwhile received an unwelcome spur from outside when Henry Ford II lambasted part of the operation there as "the cesspool of Europe" and said U.S. customers wanted better quality cars, such as those produced by German plants.

Leyland and Ford both suffered lightning strikes this week, reporting to be losing them 3,000 cars a day on the eve of the big autumn motor shows in Europe. These subsided, but the worst trouble continued at Chrysler's Scottish plant in Linwood, where 7,000 hourly-paid workers walked out Sept. 9 in protest against non-union electrical labor.

The union's own electricians were suporting a seven-week-old strike by electricians at Chrysler's Coventry production line.

CLOSURE THREATENED

Peter Griffiths, personnel chief, was warned that unless the Scottish workers go back, Chrysler is losing £1 million ($2.5 million) a day and may decide to close down its entire British production, maintaining only sales outlets. This would throw 29,000 out of work.

So far, there are few signs of management or union representatives being able to break the deadlock.

This year Chrysler, which has invested £53 million ($132.5 million) in Britain since taking over the Rootes organization, has lost 60,000 vehicles through labor disputes and nearly 12,000 of its workers now are idle.

Even the luxurious Jaguar, with two new lush models poised for promotion this fall, has recently had production disrupted.

What a humiliation, says The Evening Standard, for an industry which only five years ago made Britain the world's second-ranking auto exporter, level with Japan. Japanese production has tripled while Britain's remains static.

New Kind Of Heroin In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A New York City man, described by Crown Attorney David Scott as higher than a mere connection in a chain of heroin distribution, was remanded Tuesday to Oct. 1 for sentence on a conviction of trafficking in heroin.

Judge Janet Boland remanded Ng Yuen Hing, 37, after Mr. Scott requested a life sentence for the man, convicted of trafficking in 25 pounds of Asian heroin valued at between $3 million and $4 million on the street.

Mr. Scott said Crown counsel ordinarily do not suggest a penalty unless asked to do so. However, it was the first time that the type of heroin had appeared in Toronto and "the court must try to stop this kind of heroin from appearing," he said.

During the trial, a special agent of the United States Drug Enforcement Administration testified he contacted Ng at his hotel room and made arrangements to purchase 25 pounds of heroin.

Kind Capt. Bligh!

By BERNARD MELUNSKY

LONDON (Reuter) — Lieut. William Bligh, captain of the Bounty—authoritarian villain or misunderstood hero?

Fletcher Christian, mutineer—gallant rebel or oversexed neurotic?

These questions still compel interest almost two centuries after one of the most intriguing incidents in naval history, the mutiny on the Bounty.

A new book reassesses the strange story of the mutiny, the personalities of its leading characters and the history of the mutineers' descendants.

Author Ian Ball, Australian-born New York correspondent for London Daily Telegraph, spent 15 months researching the story and visited Pitcairn—the remote South Pacific island on which the mutineers settled and where a dwindling number of their descendants live.

His book, Pitcairn: Children of the Bounty, published by Victor Gollancz, sets out to vindicate Bligh, frequently portrayed as a sadistic monster whose tyranny eventually drove Christian to lead the mutiny.

SAILED FOR TAHITI

The Bounty drama began 16 months after the ship sailed from Spithead, England, on a botanical mission to Tahiti with Bligh as captain, Christian as master's mate and 44 officers and men.

The mutiny took place on April 28, 1789, after the crew had spent 23 weeks on the seductive island of Tahiti. After this feast of sex and merry-making, Ball says, the crew were "predisposed" to mutiny.

"To those who had left behind pliant Polynesian women, easy living, and the soft beauty of Tahiti, firm, if rule-book, direction by a captain with a mission to complete would be seen as inhuman treatment warranting desperate action if the occasion arose."

Ball argues that far from being the insufferable, despot of the Hollywood film versions of the drama, Bligh was considerate and courageous though lacking "a full measure of tact and human understanding."

SEEN AS 'WOMANIZER'

Christian, played in two Hollywood films by Clark Gable and Marlon Brando as the romantic underdog, is described by Ball as an "energetic womanizer, a skirt-chaser of almost fanatical dedication and considerable achievement."

The author says that after the idyll of Tahiti it required only a "mental storm" in Christian's brain to touch off what appears to have been an unpremeditated insurrection.

The mutiny and the casting adrift of Bligh and 18 men in an open boat—Bligh and 11 others survived the ordeal—is described as one of the worst crimes ever perpetrated against the Royal Navy.

TURNS TO PITCAIRN

Ball turns in the second half of his book to deal with Pitcairn Island, the 1¾-square-mile rock jutting into the sea on which nine mutineers eventually sought refuge with six Tahiti men and 13 women.

Today some of their direct descendants live on the island, 530 miles from Mururoa, site of French nuclear tests. The islanders appear to care little about the Bounty past.

The story of the ship and the mutiny is not taught in the island's schools. Ball says, and the only anniversary they mark is the day on which the Bounty was burned by the mutineers, Jan. 23, 1790.

The island's population, never more than 200, has fluctuated over the years. Within a few years of the mutineers' landing, only four mutineers and 10 women were surviving. Most of the others died violently—including Christian, who was murdered.

FAMILY NAMES REMAIN

By 1825 the population was 66, by 1936 it was 200. In 1972 it had dwindled to 85—and three of the six family names still perpetuate the surnames of mutineers: Christian, Young and McCoy.

Ball says that if Pitcairn's society is to survive, the islanders will either have to lure back young Pitcairners who have left home or to breed in sufficient numbers to keep the economy functioning.

Twice in the 19th century there were attempts to relocate the Pitcairners on other islands—and twice they came home.

Their society seems a unique mixture of old-style customs and modern influences. They have a dialect of their own, deep religious faith—they are Seventh-Day Adventists—and a profusion of motorbikes.

Ireland's 'Berlin Wall' Seals Off Ancient Bridge

By COLIN FROST

PETTIGO, Ireland (AP) — Ireland's version of the Berlin Wall, locally known as the concrete curtain, is 24 feet wide and three feet high. It blocks off a bridge.

It's about the only place you can actually see the Irish border, which twists and turns through 260 miles of green countryside.

Here in Petfigo, however, marking the border is simple. It runs along the Termon River, a trout stream which cuts the village in two.

About 950 villagers live on the County Donegal side of the stream in the Irish republic. About 200 are in County Fermanagh in Northern Ireland and are British subjects.

This division made little difference until the current bout of Ireland's troubles came to formerly peaceful Pettigo.

A bomb planted by Irish Republican Army guerrillas from the southern side wrecked a grocery store in the north. And then the wall went up.

WALLED OFF FAST

The British army swooped in on the morning of Sept. 17. Royal Engineers got to work with pneumatic drills and concrete mixers and the wall concrete mixers and the wall was in place by mid-day, neatly sealing off the 18th century bridge across the Termon.

At first the villagers were not sure what to make of it. The wall, it seemed, would oblige them to use the other bridge 80 yards away. That would mean passing through customs, British on the north side, Irish on the south, and add a bit to the weekly grocery bills.

"Butter 20 pence a pound up here, 28 in the Free State," she said.

The Irish republic is still called the Free State by most people here even though the name was dropped officially a quarter-century ago.

One penny—called a pee — is 2½ cents, so on butter alone a big family makes a reasonable saving.

"Cigarettes," said Bernadette, "30 pee here, 32 down below. Sugar 10 pee here, 11 pee over there. Stamps 3½ pee here, 5 pee there."

Trade was slack at the Northern Cash Stores the day the wall went up. Bernadette, who lives in the south, had to cross the official bridge to get to work.

GO OVER WALL

The girl in Johnston's grocery, 50 yards away on the southern side, shrugged it off as one of those things.

"You'd be surprised how much butter we sell," she said defiantly.

"And anyway, our bacon's only 40 pee and their's is 42."

The Royal Tank Regiment, responsible for security on the northern side, handed out leaflets telling the northern villagers: "Due to terrorist attacks we have to improve your safety and restrict the terrorists' freedom of movement.

"We don't want to cause unnecessary inconvenience."

As a result, the IRA has lost an escape route and Ireland's pig smugglers have lost a favorite crossing point.

SMUGGLING WAS EASY

Thousands of smuggled pigs cross the Irish border every week, heading north or south according to variations in support prices.

It's an easy living, since neither government, British nor Irish, has yet found a foolproof way of distinguishing between a northern monarchist pig or a southern republican pig.

Not that the smugglers will be hurt much. At 8 o'clock sharp every evening the customs men shut shop and go home.

Greek Students Protest

ATHENS (UPI) — Police Tuesday dispersed demonstrating students who had tried to hold a meeting at the University of Athens law school, the scene of violent clashes earlier this year.

Police estimated the number of demonstrators at 200, but witnesses said there were almost 400 there. The students shouted anti-government and anti-American slogans.

The students said they wanted to protest the government's cancellation of army service deferments for several students.

"Any such meeting will be against university laws," the university senate said.

Denied entrance for the meeting, the students organized a demonstration, shouting "Papadopoulos, the people do not want you!"; "Americans out!" and "This is not Chile!"

Police met the demonstrators near the ministry of the interior and dispersed them forcibly but without using clubs, witnesses said.

NDP Looking at 'Cheap' Ferries

Victoria Times
WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 26, 1973 49
FOURTH SECTION

Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace said Tuesday he believes the provincial government tried to get federal approval for a cheaper but "less safe" ferry design.

Wallace raised the issue in the legislature Tuesday, adding more confusion to the already cloudy issue of the design contract for two B.C. ferries.

"I'm saying," he told reporters later, "that evidence could be interpreted as showing B.C. Ferry Authority was trying to build a cheaper ferry which could be operated more cheaply with fewer personnel but at a possible risk to the safety of passengers."

Fallis told Wallace that specifications given Nickum and Spaulding architects in Seattle for designing a conceptual plan for the ferries included reduced safety features.

The Canadian Steamship Inspection Authorities, according to Fallis, revised that conceptual plan to include almost all the safety features normally built into B.C.'s ferries.

Fallis backs up the suggestion with a telegram he received from the CSIA deputy chairman Sept. 24 stating the ferry design was approved with a 70 per cent reduction in lifesaving equipment subject to the addition of a number of safety features.

Those features are: three compartment subdivisions, provision of double hulls, a deluge system on the car decks, insulation of the boat deck to a certain standard, nearby presence of other ships and restricted voyages.

Wallace says the implication of the telegram is that the original design did not include those specifications and says he will ask Transport Minister Robert Strachan to table the original specifications.

Strachan, however, denied in the house Tuesday the government had ever proposed a single-hulled vessel.

The new ferries, which Strachan said will be in use by 1975, are a 274-car passenger ferry and a truck ferry.

Controversy over the ferries began last week when the government was criticized for awarding the design contract to the Seattle firm.

Strachan has since said that while a $10,000 contract was awarded Nickum and Spaulding, that was simply for drawing up a conceptual design and the final design contract has not yet been awarded.

He said the conceptual design was given the American firm because of their expertise in a certain area of design but Fallis says the revised design is little different from most of the B.C. Ferries now in use.

B.C. RAIL BOARD INCREASED TO NINE

The B.C. Railway board of directors will be expanded to nine members from five under legislation introduced in the house Tuesday.

Premier Barrett, president of the railway, said outside the house the expansion will allow members of the general public to be appointed to the board. Trade union and forest company representatives may be appointed, he said.

He would not say when the four members would be chosen.

The five members of the board now are the premier, Labor Minister Bill King, Joe Broadbent (vice-president of the railway), E. F. Rowland and Robert Swanson.

Three other bills were introduced in the house by Barrett, in his role as minister of finance. He described the bills as "routine administrative" measures.

Amendments to the Income Tax Act tidy up what appears to have been an omission when the corporation tax was raised last year to 12 per cent from 10. The foreign tax credit deductible by a corporation should also be increased to 12 per cent and the new legislation does so retroactive to Jan. 1, 1973.

The amendments also increase retroactively to Jan. 1 the amount of logging tax payable that may be decucted from income tax. The amount will be increased from 10-50 to 12-51.

Amendments to the Colored Gasoline Tax Act clarifies changes made to the act during the spring session which say users of natural gas and liquefied petroleum gas are subject to taxation.

Another section of the amendments adds inspection, audit and appeals provisions similar to those in the Gasoline Tax and Social Service Tax Acts. Those amendments are retroactive to April 18, 1973, the date originally intended by the act.

The fourth bill amends the Corporation Capital Tax Act to insure that Crown corporations and insurance corporations are subject to the tax.

Price of Fame Proves Costly to Some Stars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucille Ball was in a short robe sitting under the hair dryer in her bedroom when two fans barged in.

Carol Burnett had a time evicting an Ohio family from her kitchen. They demanded a tour of the house and didn't want to leave until they got it.

Peter Graves was the cause of a traffic jam in New York when a taxi driver leaped from his cab and ran over for an autograph.

Such can be the price of fame. Instant recognition is currency that can be caused at the box office—but it can be at the cost of a star's privacy.

Stars, like anyone else, seek moments of peace and quiet. But a stroll down the street can turn into a mob scene of autograph hunters. In restuarants their soup may grow cold as they sign autographs. A day at an amusement park with the family can turn into a shambles.

As happened to Lucille Ball, sometimes their homes are even invaded, thanks to the fan magazines and movie star maps that regularly publish their addresses.

"I would personally like to choke those map makers," said Carol Burnett. "We once had a man and his wife and two kids walk right through our front door and into our kitchen and ask my daughter for a tour of the house.

"When we asked them to leave they got huffy and mad and said they'd driven all the way from Ohio and they weren't about to leave."

Some stars have been known to turn on the lawn sprinklers to shoo away people traipsing across the yard with cameras.

Most fans will listen to reason if a celebrity patiently explains that he considers his home an inviolate sanctuary. But not always. There are times, Pat Boone said, when "fans suspended all rules of etiquette and courtesy and common human decency."

Robert Redford, complaining that he has been hounded unmercifully by one group of fans, filed a lawsuit against them this summer.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

Arbutus Crafts is seeking volunteers to work with 90 physically disabled people, the largest enrolment ever, in its 1119 Vancouver St. workshop.

Volunteers are needed to teach caning, leather work, basketry and weaving, and training in these skills will be provided if required.

The disabled workers earn three-quarters of the profit from sale of articles they make.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BARTLETT — In loving memory of Grandad, C. J. Bartlett, who passed away September 26, 1971.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is lust as dear.
—Always remembered by Frances, Jerry, John and Andy.

CRONK — In loving memory of our step-Dad, Bert Cronk who passed away September 26, 1966.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall.
Love's remembrance outlasts all,
And the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance dear Popper of you.
—Ever remembered by your Step-Children.

OUR $47,500
Beach Drive Apartment
that's selling like there's no tomorrow

Sure this apartment would sell like a "hotcake" anywhere but put it on Beach Drive in Oak Bay where the high cost of land doesn't usually allow for so much space and value at such a moderate price — and you can really see what the excitement is all about.

The ROYAL ALEXANDRA has three other one and two bedroom models from just $29,900 - $51,500.

Come see them quick, because we won't have them long. They're selling like the Hotcake.

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Black African delegates led a walkout today from the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank when South Africa's finance minister began to speak.

There might have been more protesters, but Nicolaas Diederichs, spoke first on the morning program and many delegates had not arrived.

The others included India's ficance minister, Y. B. Chavan, and representatives of Rwanda, Tanzania, Republic of Congo, Turkey, Iraqu, Jordan and Bangladesh.

Diederichs continued to speak:

"If that is their way of expressing their feelings, then they may certainly do so," he had said earlier.

When he finished speaking, the delegates returned to the hall.

Meanwhile, the industrial countries tentatively agreed to contribute another $4.5 billion over the next three years to provide low-interest loans to developing nations.

The decision, which still requires some further minor negotiations and ratification by each member state, was announced after World Bank chief Robert McNamara warned that chaos might result if the ald funds are withheld.

Canada pledged $274.5 million as a donor member of the International Development Association which forms the low-interest lending subsidiary of the World Bank.

Canada's contribution represents six per cent of the total pledge for the new three-year period.

A further drafting meeting of World Bank members will be required later this week before a full document is drawn up on the new loan pledges but a conference spokesman said Tuesday "no major issues remain to be settled."

Normally donor countries allow themselves a full year to obtain congressional and parliamentary approvals but with the current three-year IDA replenishment expiring next June 30, governments likely will drive hard to meet the new deadline.

The announcement defuses what might have become one of the most controversial issues between the industrial and developing countries.

TSE Trading Halted Over Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Trading in shares of several mining companies with holdings in Ireland was halted on the Toronto Stock Exchange today following the announcement of strict taxes on such companies by the Irish Republic.

A 20-year tax exemption on mining profits, introduced in 1967 by the previous administration, is to be ended. The new taxes could run as high as 50 per cent in some cases.

Companies included in the halt were International Mogul, Northgate, Tara Exploration, Anglo United, Avoca, Irish Copper, Coldstream, Discovery, Barymin and Argosy.

DEEPEST CAVE FOUND BY COLLEGE PROBERS

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A member of a combined cave-exploring expedition from McMaster University, Hamilton, University of Guelph and the Alberta Speleological Society, said Tuesday his group had discovered the deepest known cave in Canada or the United States.

George Tracey of Brampton said the expedition had explored Arctomy's Cave in Mount Robson in British Columbia the first two weeks in August and found it to be about 1,800 feet deep and 1½ miles long.

Since then, the expedition has been compiling its data which it will send to the Eldon Club in England from which the Guinness Books of Records gets many of its facts.

Mr. Tracey said the expedition also found a skeleton, believed to be that of a bear, about 700 feet inside the cave and 250 feet down.

The same team surveyed the Yorkshire Bot in Alberta about seven months ago and found it to be about 1,260 feet deep, Mr. Tracey said. Prior to the Alberta discovery, the deepest known cave had been the Neff Canyon in Utah.

Watchdog Approved

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The editorial division of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers' Association has unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the appointment of an editorial co-ordinator to work for the improvement of editorial quality of Canadian newspapers.

William T. Galt, of The Vancouver Sun, chairman of the editorial division, said the co-ordinator — if approved by the general council — will be appointed to the staff of the CDNPA, which represents 87 of Canada's 113 daily newspapers.

Don't Stone the Crows —They're 'Very Useful'

"Crows are very useful," said Dave Stirling, who is also director of the Canadian Nature Federation.

Stirling was responding to Oak Bay council's discussion Monday of ways to keep down the municipality's crow population.

The municipality has had 17 complaints about noise and nuisance caused by crows this year, and council is considering the possiblity of shooting some of them.

"People in North America are too quick to look on any wild animal as a problem," said Stirling.

"It seems that some people would like to have a nice sterile world with none of these dogs, crows or pigeons."

Crows are clever birds, he said, and they do sometimes beat out smaller birds for food.

"But if it wasn't for the crows the robins would be knee deep and we'd have to be shooting them," he said.

U.S. Says Canada To Be Consulted

UNITED NATIONS—(CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp says he has received assurances from Henry Kissinger that Canada will not be excluded from any grand design the United States contemplates in Western Europe.

Sharp told a news conference Tuesday that the new U.S. state secretary agreed with the position Canada has taken on guarding her Atlantic partnership.

The nine Common Market countries responded with a 22-point declaration of principles, but nowhere was Canada mentioned.

After the text of the declaration was published Monday, Sharp quickly took up the matter with Kissinger, fearing that the U.S. and the Common Market, in setting up their new partnership, would eventually leave Canada out in the cold.

FEARS ALLAYED

Canada is working on her own set of principles which also deals with the Common Market, but within the framework of NATO.

Canada's delegation in NATO has prepared a working paper which includes a statement of principles, a Canadian spokesman said today, but he said it is not yet the official government posftion.

Sharp himself noted at the news conference that the mechanism for updating the Atlantic partnership already exists in the NATO treaty.

Article 2 of the treaty calls for economic co-operation among the 15 NATO members, among them the Common Market's major members as well as Canada and the U.S.

The Canadian spokesman said the working paper already has been circulated in NATO.

PAVE WAY FOR TALKS

A whole new Canada-U.S. dialogue seemed in the offing in the wake of the Sharp-Kissinger meeting. The two foreign ministers talked for 80 minutes, mostly on international issues.

Bread-and-butter issues such as inflation, energy shortages and oil-pricing policies were temporarily shelved until they can be taken up when there is more time later this fall.

Sharp and Kissinger probably will meet in Washington early in November after Prime Minister Trudeau returns from his China visit.

Sharp further disclosed that Canada also plans to hold a full-fledged ministerial meeting with members of the U.S. cabinet. There hasn't been such a meeting since the last one in Ottawa about three years ago. But the Canadian spokesman said a lot of preparation is needed for this kind of meeting and it may be months away.

Copters Join Search

Three army helicopters were sent from Edmonton today to join the search for two planes missing in northern and central B.C.

A spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria said the helicopters will be used to make deep valley searches. Such forays have been hampered over the past week by low lying clouds and fog.

The helicopters will release three Navy Tracker aircraft from the search. They will return to their base in Victoria and resume routine environment and fisheries patrols on the coast.

The search has entered its eighth day for Neil Carey of North Vancouver, missing on a flight from Quesnel to Terrace, and sixth day for a Navy Tracker with four men aboard that disappeared while searching for Carey.

A rescue official said five military aircraft spent a total of 30 hours hunting for the missing Tracker in the Terrace area Tuesday. Four other military aircraft and eight civilian planes carried out a search of the Quesnel and Vanderhoof areas for Carey.

The spokesman said the area were it is probable the two planes went down will be covered completely three times before any thought is given to abandoning the search.

Director Named For Resthaven

John William Groves, 8598 Bourne Terrace, has been appointed the provincial government representative on the board of directors of Sidney's Resthaven Hospital.

Cabinet orders made public today revealed the appointment which is for a two-year term effective Tuesday.

Air Route Sought

West Coast Air Services has applied to the Air Tansport Committee in Ottawa for permission to operate a twice-daily seaplane service between Victoria and New Westminster.

The application is being opposed by competing airlines and a hearing is expected in spring, with a decision by Ottawa probably one year away.

The Vancouver-based company proposes to fly between the Inner Harbor and the Fraser River.

New Westminster was selected because the Victoria-Vancouver run is already served by Air West and Victoria Flying Services.

Millwright Walkout Slows Alberni Mills

About 400 maintenance men and tradesmen at MacMillan Bloedel's Port Alberni lumber mills failed to report for work today because of a wage revision dispute.

An IWA spokesman said the walkout would last for 24 hours.

Keith Bennett, vice-president of Forest Industrial Relations, said the industry is not compelled to negotiate higher wage rates until June 14, 1974, but had offered new rates to the IWA Tuesday.

Bennett said the industry will not negotiate again with the IWA until "IWA leaders accept responsibility under the collective agreement and restore order to the industry."

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel in Port Alberni said the Somass Sawmill and the Alberni Pacific Sawmill were "slowly closing down" because of the dispute.

Inn Appeal Rejected

An appeal by Mediaeval Inns, 1005 Broad, against a B.C. Labor Relations Board certification decision has been rejected, the labor department announced today.

The board ordered certification last April of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, Local 835, as bargaining agent for employees at the restaurant.

Colwood Rotary Aids Workshop

The Colwood Rotary Club has presented a $1,000 cheque to the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded to be used to equip the new Langwood workshop in Langford.

After accepting the cheque at a Rotary Club meeting, workshop manager Don Groves said the workshop will be used to teach household skills to retarded persons over 18.

The workshop will open in October with eight students.

Home Vegetable Crisper In Garden Not Fridge!

While we must realize it is taking a sporting chance, a number of vegetables grown especially for our enjoyment during winter are left in the ground until we want them for use. A few others should be lifted before hard frost (it it is forecast) and carefully stored to use week-by-week as long as they last.

Here are those which normally remain in prime condition in the garden until the end of the year. They could remain longer if the uncertainties of winter did not dictate caution. Gamblers will leave them in the ground, using them as long as they can dig into the soil.

Celery is used from now until Christmas from the home garden; lift the last few roots before the year's end and store in a cool place.

Use as much broccoli as is produced, while it is sweet and fresh. No more will come when weather gets colder.

Winter cabbages are surprisingly hardy, especially savoys. The crinkly leaves resist many degrees of frost, even improving with the weather.

Rain followed by winter sunshine may cause them to split. Guard against this possibility of losing too many by making use of them while still good, or cutting them for storage in a corner of a cold but not frosty shed. Rain deflectors of plastic on wire frames something like lampshades, such as those used by rose and chrysanthemum show enthusiasts, would do the same job with cabbages.

Brussel sprouts are customarily finished by the end of the year. Winter radish is left in the ground as long as no hard frost threatens. This is a large root, with crisp texture and mild flavor like the white round summer turnip. The radish is unexpectedly interesting as a cooked vegetable, fine for pseudo Chinese dishes and equally good when grated for salads.

The nutritious tuberous rooted artichoke can be used from the ground all winter until about February when, like onions and potatoes, new growth shoots are noticeable indicating the time is near for replanting.

None of the root crops should be eaten (in any quantity that is) after these green new shoots appear. Particularly is this so with parsnip. This vegetable stays in the ground for winter use, is improved by frost action, and is good until about early March.

After that time, new growth shows at the tips, and the roots should not be eaten. While some people continue to do so without ill effects, it has been brought to our attention that others are affected. eChemical changes from storage material to growth material is the reason given.

Among the vegetables which take almost any amount of cold thast we get here, are kale plants. I have pushed off snow to gather the leaves and they taste grand, much sweeter than hard headed winter cabbage...

Leeks I've chipped from frozen ground beneath snow, and are just what we need in cold weather. Swiss chard plants survive quite a lot of cold, though prolonged frost suspends their usefulness. When it i over, the plants recover.

It can be seen that moderate protection of rough cold-framing with a glass cover and heavy sacking will keep these winter hardy vegetables in use all through winter.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

by FRED KARPIN

In this deal, our South declarer made as beautiful a falsecard as I have ever seen. Its practical effect was that it led the East defender into making a discard that was calculated to mislead (or at least not help declarer. But unfortunately for his side, East's discard misled West at the same time, with dire consequences. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After winning his king of spades, at trick two West continued with the spade ace, East's queen falling. South, having the feeling that it might be advantageous for East to believe that South had only two spades, played the jack instead of the four-spot! Although the jack was a winner if it had been preserved, South knew that it would remain so for but a fleeting second, until West would lead a third spade for East to ruff.

West now led the high ten of spades, and East, being certain that South was going to trump the trick, tossed away the three of clubs, inducing declarer (and West) to believe that East had no interest in the club suit. Declarer, of course, followed suit in spades.

West naturally concluded that it was futile to lead a club at trick four in view of East's "no interest." And so he led a diamond. The four was played from dummy, East put up the ten, and South captured the trick with his king.

Declarer now led all of his trumps. This was the position prior to the lead of his last trump:

When declarer now led the four of trumps, discarding the board's queen of clubs, East became the victim of a squeeze. If he discarded the club ace, declarer's king would become his game-going trick. And if, instead, he tossed away the diamond deuce, dummy's A-Q-7 would capture the last three tricks.

Passengers Flee Fire

LONDON (AP) — A fire broke out in the international flights terminal of London's Heathrow Airport today.

Hundreds of passengers evacuated from the two-storey building stood on roads outside and watched firemen battling flames on the roof.

The airport press office said there were no casualties.

Public address systems announced a delay on all departing flights.

An airport spokesman said the fire apparently broke out in an oil-fired central heating plant on the roof of Terminal 3, which handles international flights.

Water, believed coming from the ruptured heating system poured down through the roof of the building, drenching offices and flooding into passenger concourses.

Ticket desks, shops and baggage areas were abandoned as an estimated 1,000 passengers and staff rushed outside.

Innocent Nostalgia Packs A Hefty Punch

By PAUL GARDNER

NEW YORK (NYT) — The guileless innocence of the early 1960s when teenagers still guzzled beer and necked at drive-in restaurants, and hair styles were ducktails or pony-tails, and music rocked to the Twist—is unsettling even the most sophisticated filmgoers at American Graffiti. Recently, Hollywood has glutted the market with nostalgia in all sorts of campy shapes and plastic sizes. But the past is not exploited in this cinematic time capsule by George Lucas, the 28-year-old director who graduated from high school in the early sixties.

His film disquiets applauding viewers, and bridges generation gaps, because suddenly those tranquilized years before Vietnam, the Kennedy assassinations, pot, pop and the Pill, seem farther away than the depressed '30s.

"There's no message or long speech," Lucas said, "but you know that when the story ends America underwent a drastic change. The early '60s were the end of an era. It hit us all very hard. I was angry and hurt."

Every major studio turned down a chance to make American Graffti before Universal hesitantly released it after pondering its commercial value for six months.

American Graffiti appeared troublesome because the fragmented story of four high school seniors was impressionistic. Nothing really "happened"; there was no plot.

With one exception, the seniors are composites of George Lucay and his high school buddies, but mostly they are reflections of the director who grew up in the central California town of Modesto, which produces wine, citrus fruit and boredom.

The students are Steve, the high school's big man on campus who becomes an insurance agent in Modesto; Terry "the toad," myopic and awkward, reported missing in Vietnam; John, the champion drag racer killed two years later by a drunk driver, and Curt, the portly intellectual who becomes a writer and moves to Canada.

"I spent my teen years cruising the main street in Modesto," the director explained.

"I was Terry the toad, fumbling with girls. Then I became a drag racer like John. I was interested in cars until a bad accident almost killed me. And finally I became Curt, I got serious and went to college."

He was never a film buff — or much of a student. He wanted to become an artist but his parents wouldn't send him to art school.

So he enrolled at the University of Southern California and studied film. "Everybody thought I'd end up as a ticket-taker at Disneyland," he laughed.

Instead he won a scholarship to work at Warner Brothers with Francis Ford Coppola, the director-producer who later produced George Lucas's one previous film, THX 1138, a science-fiction yarn.

His next project will be an adventure in outer space. Meantime, he's trying to convince Universal that he is not a director who can be assigned any script. Graffiti was successful because it came entirely from my head," he stated. "It was my concept. And that's the only way I can work."

Lucas was never a big wheel at his high school. And he'll never sell insurance in Modesto or anywhere else.

"Steve was totally fictitious," he said, "and he was the most difficult to create."

$32M Eyed From Lottery

MONTREAL (CP) — Julien Cote, one of the men who turned Quebec's provincial lottery —Loto-Quebec—into a highly-successful venture, today begins the task of bringing equal success to a near-national venture on behalf of the 1976 Summer Olympics.

Cote's appointment as vice-president and director general of the Olympic Lottery of Canada Corp., was announced Tuesday by Roger Rousseau, commissioner-general for the Montreal Games.

The organizing committee hopes to realize revenues of $32 million through sale of lottery tickets in this country. The lottery was authorized by the federal government last July as one of the means for financing the 1976 Games.

"There's a tremendous amount of work involved if we want to cover Canada the same as Loto-Quebec covers this province," Cote said. "We must build up documents and see people and we have only three weeks to do it."

Roussea said details of the lottery, such as ticket prices, frequency of sale, and prizes, will be made public "within one month," with tickets probably available for sale "toward the end of this year."

One of the difficulties that must be overcome is the non-participation of some provinces.

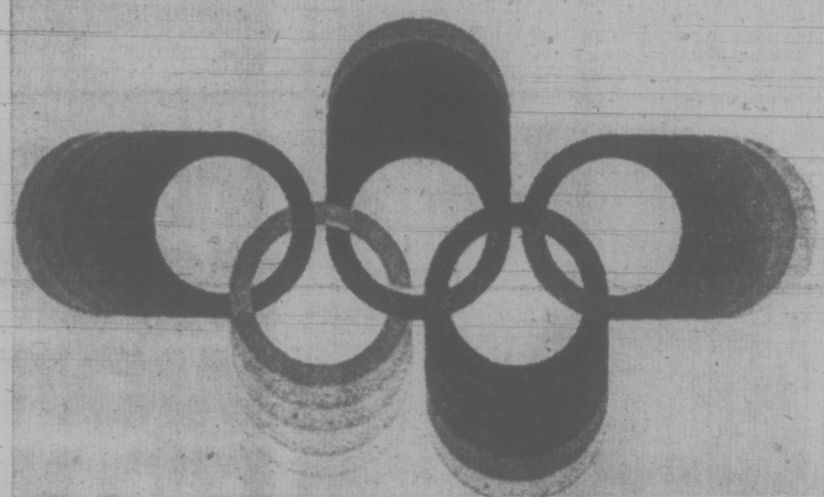
The governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have declined to take part in the venture, while the committee is awaiting a decision from Nova Scotia.

With Canada's Olympic stamps already on sale and the first sets of commemorative sterling silver coins to help finance the Games set for distribution by the end of December, the committee Tuesday unveiled what it hopes will be another source of revenue.

The first multi-colored poster was put on display. This is the first of a series of posters that will go on sale around the world to explain that "Montreal will play host to the world in 1976."

The poster bears the standard five interlocking circles — representing the five continents — coupled with lines of decreasing contrasts in black, blue, red, yellow and green. They will be the standard 36 by 24 inch size.

Montréal 1976



SYMBOL of the 1976 Olympics which will appear on posters consists of five interlocking circles.

Gerry Snyder, vice-president of finance for the organizing committee, said that negotiations are still under way for the sale and distribution of the posters.

"Someone will be selling them, but to what extent we won't know for another month," Snyder said. "We're negotiating a deal for distribution throughout the world without cost to the committee, but giving the money revenue to our organization."

On its original projection of revenues, the Montreal committee listed $250 million through the sale of Olympic coins, $10 million for stamp sales, and another $1.5 million realized from the sale of posters, brochures, photos, films and other allied sources.

In an entirely different vein, Rousseau said the organizing committee had no intention of entering the current controversy about the site of the Olympic Village.

Montreal city council endorsed mayor Jean Drapeau's selection of Viau Park — an 85-acre area including park and the city's golf course — as the site of the Olympic Village.

Teaching Misled By New Schools

VANCOUVER (CP) — The former general secretary of the B.C. Teachers' Federation says educationists have been led down the garden path in recent years by two movements in education.

Charles Ovans told the Canadian Association of School Administrators that students have been sold short because educationists adhere to these movements and they do not reflect the needs of students.

He said one of these movements is the humanistic movement with its philosophy of "down on intellect, up with feeling."

"A lot of free schools traded on that structure," he said, "and that movement led us down a blind alley."

Ovans said the second group which has misled the teaching profession is made up of behaviorists, those who believe in manipulating human behavior through a system of rewards and punishments.

He said behaviorists' theories have been shown to work and that for a short-term period man's behavior can be controlled.

"But it's manipulation and it has nothing to do with the magic of human nature, with the capacity to shape and mould yourself," he said.

"The task of education is to bring out that fundamental capacity."

The humanists' failings are related to the fact that each person has a responsibility for self-development, he said, "and development occurs only through striving."

"Education is what happens to you in the course of living, of striving or struggling. To drop out, to cop out, to turn off is to give up on living as a human being. Those who condone, or cater to, find excuse for or tolerate dropping out are anti-humanists, not humanists."

JOE McINNIS FELL IN LOVE WITH ARCTIC HARP SEAL

OTTAWA (CP)—The name of Joe Mac Innis of Toronto may one day join the list of famous Canadian explorers because, like Samuel de Champlain, Henry Hudson and Alexander Mackenzie, he has been opening up new territories.

His frontier is the more than one million square miles of salt water that covers the continental shelf and slope off this country's 60,000 miles of island and mainland coastline.

"I'm a Canadian who's just delighted that we have these two frontiers here — the ocean and the Arctic. And when you combine the two of them in the Arctic Ocean it's, wow, fantastic," he said in an interview before leaving for Baffin Island for undersea study in the Clearwater Fiord near the top of Cumberland Sound, 1,500 miles straight north of Fredericton.

He and his crew planned to study sea mammals and marine life and test some improvements on Subigloo, an eight-foot transparent plastic bubble he designed that serves as their underwater diving station.

Subigloo allows divers the advantages of an air-filled underwater base. Already tested in the Arctic, it is the "son" of Sublimnosn, Dr. Mac Innis's first undersea chamber, which has been used in Georgian Bay for three years.

★ ★ ★

"The philosophy behind Subigloo was that it should be semi-portable so that divers could build it under water. Building it is not much harder than putting up a tent and it's the same idea. It's the base camp, the foothold."

Subigloo consists of two halves of a clear-plastic sphere, the bottom one containing the entrance. The halves are taken below the surface and set in a framework of steel struts that sits on the ocean bottom.

Since the entrance hole is at the bottom, air can be pumped in and trapped in the bubble, forcing out the water. It thus provides an air chamber for a workroom on the ocean floor.

"The major work goes into the ballast. Holding all that stuff down on the bottom takes about eight tons of ballast. We are now redesigning the ballast tray so we can use screw-in anchors, maybe four or six, that can be driven into the ocean floor."

However, Dr. Mac Innis also had other purposes for his northern experiment.

"The scientific purpose is to do further study and photography of the sea mammals in the Clearwater Fiord," he said. The animals include beluga or white whales, bowhead whales, ring seals, harp seals "and possibly a Greenland shark."

Dr. Mac Innis may have been the first man ever to come face to face with a harp seal under water.

"I was enthralled . . . This graceful, fluid form. It was a ballet with him swimming over me upside down and twisting. I just sat there with a camera and fell in love with a harp seal."

He has earned a reputation for underwater filming with his photo and films from expeditions in South America, Europe, the Caribbean, the Pacific and the Arctic.

★ ★ ★

At 36, he is president of Undersea Research Ltd. Besides designing and developing underwater diving stations his research into the psychological and physiological responses of humans living and working in ocean depths has led him to publish more than 25 scientific papers.

Dr. Mac Innis is a medical doctor as well as an underwater expert and has often served as medical adviser to United States Navy diving teams.

He also has written a book of poetry, Underwater Images, published by Mc Clelland and Stewart in 1971.

Great Letter-Box Theft: Anti-Soviet Rumor?

Snide Tales Drift Among Diplomats— Sino-Soviet Relations Worsen

Special to the Times
By JOHN BURNS

PEKING — Everybody in Peking is talking abut the missing letter box.

It sounds like the title of a new thriller by Agatha Christie, but Chinese officials say there is no mystery involved — only sinister motives.

As the incensed officials tell the story, the box was carried off in the middle of the night by two men in a car bearing Soviet embassy licence plates.

The officials say the villains probably hoped to obtain information that is ordinarily unavailable to foreigners by studying letters written by ordinary citizens.

The incident is said to have occurred just before the Tenth Congress of the Communist Party, which was held in Peking last month. The implication is that the Soviets were seeking foreknowledge of when the Congress would meet and what it would do — information that was probably quiete widely disseminated among ordinary Chinese people.

"These people will stop at nothing to get what they want," said one Chinese source. "They are very crude."

A Soviet embassy official, after consulting Ambassador Vassily S. Tolstikov, denied the charge. "We have no information on this matter," he said. "This must be another fable of idle persons."

Recounting the story to Western diplomats in recent days, Chinese officials have conceded that there has been no formal complaints to the Soviets and no attempt to recover the box. They say the hard evidence to support the charges is lacking.

What intrigues most diplomats, however, is not the authenticity of the charges but the fact that they have been made at all. This is seen as a reflection on the low ebb that relations between the two countries have reached in recent times.

The letterbox incident comes hard on the heels of an escalating series of propaganda blasts that the two capitals have unleashed against one another raising the pitch of the dispute between them to its shrillest point since the border clashes in the spring of 1969.

In one of the last exchanges before the letter box story started going the rounds in Peking, the Chinese likened Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev to Hitler and accused the Kremlin of preparing for an attack on China. The Soviets countered with charges that Chinese troops have repeatedly violated the border of the Mongolain Republic, increasing tension along the frontier to a new high. Diplomats here tend to discount the talk of war, believing that neither nation regards settlement of the dispute by force of arms as a viable option. It is more and more the fashion in Peking, however, to ask how much further the propaganda war can go before the disputants begin to take concrete steps against one another.

Trade and transport links between the two countries, which have been renewed by formal agreements that were signed only recently, appear to be secure for the time being. But a concrete measure that it not ruled out by diplomats in the Chinese capital is a token expulsion of diplomats by one side, probably followed by a reciprocal move from the other side.

As far as the letter box bisiness is concerned, the Chinese appear to have decided against any such move. This could be because they lack proof that would be convincing in the eyes of the world, or because they feel they can embarrass the Soviets more by simply putting the story about in the diplomatic community.

Diplomats point out that the latter strategy has its risks, too. By accusing unnamed Soviet personnel of criminal activities without formally pursuing the matter, say the diplomats, the Chinese run the risk of the Soviets making similar, undocumented charges against Chinese personnel in Moscow.

Apparently the only evidence against the Soviets in the letter box affair are the reports of Chinese bystanders who claim to have seen the whole thing. As officials tell it, these bystanders saw a car draw up to the box at dead of night, disgorging two men who proceeded to pry the box loose with a hammer, bundle it into the car and drive off. Officials say that the bystanders took the car's licence number, which was traced to the Soviet embassy. As further evidence they cite the fact that the box is an area of the city not far from the Soviet embassy.

Adding to the atmosphere of intrigue that surrounds the whole affair, the Chinese say that the miscreants attempted to mask their activities by turning on the car's powerful headlights and spotlights. This was supposedly a device to obscure the vision of bystanders.

If it all sounds like something out of a novel, it is not the first time in recent weeks that Chinese officials have accused the Soviet embassy of illicit activities. Another charge that has been made in private conversations with Western diplomats is that Soviet personnel have been going into restaurants and other public places and introducing themselves as Canadians or Albanians, in the hope of drawing Chinese citizens into conversations that the Chinese would avoid if they knew their identity.

Diplomats who find the letter box story hard to accept are even more incredulous at this one. Many of them find it hard to believe that the Soviet officials could be so unfamiliar with Chinese habits as to think that they could draw ordinary citizens into substantive discussions about politics or anything of consequence with foreigners, no matter what their nationality.

Even in these relatively relaxed times it is invariably the case that foreigners must keep their informal conversations with chance acquaintances at a fairly superficial level. For discussions of moment it is still necessary to work through official channels for appointments with approved spokesmen.

It is nonetheless a fact that Soviet personnel have approached other foreigners here in an attempt to have them procure information for them that is not otherwise available to the Soviet embassy.

Perhaps the most blatant example of this occurred late last year when a Soviet airline representative in Peking suggested to a Western correspondent that he gather together material for the embassy on the Chinese airline.

The correspondent hoped for a ticket at the lower of two rates offered by the Russian airline, but after the cut-rate ticket had been issued the Soviet representative asked for it back, then demanded that the correspondent provide him with information about the Chinese airline in return for his ticket to Moscow. The correspondent refused and demanded the refund of his money, which he got.

The Chinese learnt of the incident at the time but took no action, possibly because proof was lacking. Possibly, too, it was because in the climate of tension between the two countries they do not find such tactics surprising.

U.S. City Growth Slows

WASHINGTON (WP) — The rate of growth in large U.S. metropolitan areas has slowed sharply since 1970, the U.S. Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

The largest ones — those with two million people or more — hardly grew at all, and two of the very biggest — New York and Los Angeles — actually lost a bit of population.

The Census analysis covers population growth in major urban areas between April of 1970, when the last decennial census was taken, and July 1, 1972.

The census bureau found that for all of the metropolitan populations the growth rate in those two years was 2.2 per cent. If it continued at that pace, the population growth in the 1970s in the big centres would be only about 11 per cent, as compared with the 16.6 per cent rate of growth they experienced in the 1960s.

Demographers had noted a slowing of the growth rate around big cites late in the 1960s but said Tuesday the new census study is the first hard evidence that the pace has slowed to a significant degree.

Most of them attribute the change to the unexpectedly sharp decline in births which set in during the 1960s, causing the long-term expectations of population growth in the U.S. to be drastically lowered. If the current rate of births was to be maintained for the next 70 years the total population of the country would begin to decline.

According to one census demographer, there is no evidence in the statistics so far that there has been a fall-off in the number of people migrating from rural areas to the major urban centres, the pattern of population change for decades. Nearly all of the change can be attributed to the declining birth rate, he said.

However, at least two other demographers said Tuesday they thought there has been an absolute slow-down in the migration into the metropolitan areas.

"We've reached a saturation phenomenon," said Henry Shryock of the Centre for Population Research at Georgetown University in Washington. There had been a "slackening" of the migration to urban areas late in the 1960s, he said, and its effects are just now being measured in the census reports.

Calvin Beale, agriculture department population expert, said he has examined populatin trends in 30 states since the 1970 census and has concluded there is a significant trend away from metropolitan concentration. He said the census bureau report seems to confirm that.

Beale said the key to that trend is a marked change in the pattern of employment. Non-metropolitan areas are now getting enough job opportunities to effectively counter the long-term movement of people from rural areas to the cities.

In the 1960s, Beale said, there was an increase in the number of manufacturing jobs when factories began moving away from central cities and into the countryside.

Now, Beale said, the big increase in employment is coming in the service industries, which is the fastest-growing segment in the economy, rural or urban.

JOLLY GIANTS OF JUSTICE LIVE IT UP

SAN ANTONIO (WP) — Perhaps nowhere else outside of army bases is there such a Texas-sized display of modern hardware designed to protect, detect, snoop, ferret out, observe, survey, threaten, frighten, cower, incapacitate, paralyze, disable and just plain kill.

The 190 commercial exhibiters who fought for the chance to buy space at the annual conference of the International Association of Chiefs of Police brought with them enough sophisticated mechanical aides to fill every available inch of space in a huge exhibition hall.

The grim efficiency projected by hand guns, automatic rifles, specially equipped helicopters, chemical sprays, newer and more powerful search lights and quicker-draw holsters doesn't really do justice, however, to the 5,000 generally jovial mostly middle-aged delegates.

About half are police chiefs, the organization said, and the remainder lower-level police personnel or people in police-related work, like criminology.

The moods sometimes mix with jarring results, a Kodak display pairs slides of grisly murder scenes, including closeups of dismembered bodies, with shots of semi-nude models.

In between exhibits, workshops on auto theft and seminars on organized international crime, the conference resembles a pro footballers reunion's years after.

More than half of the men seem taller and more powerfully built than averager, with greying (or balding) heads and the kind of protruding belly that comes when once active men no longer feel the need to keep themselves in top shape.

They've been squiring their party-dressed wives through an endless round of evening hospitality, laughing uproariously at ethnic jokes (mostly Irish and Italian), and poking fun at the intense politicking of several candidates for the job of IACP sixth vice-president, a job designed to lead almost automatically in six years to IACB president.

By contrast, the exhibit hall seems more tuned to the continuous Sperry Univac film titled in dripping, blood-red letters, Evil Walks Among Us.

A brochure on the film, passed out by hot-panted hostesses who click along the concrete floor in white, high-heeled boots, notes:

"See how crime stalks the streets of our cities and towny ... how decay haunts our communities ... slowing growth, impeding public safety ..."

SEATTLE GAS PUMPS IDLE

Times News Services

Eighty-five to 90 per cent of service stations in the Puget Sound basin will be closed by Friday unless the Cost of Living Council "stops nit-picking and foot-dragging" and allows gasoline price increases, the director of the Automobile Club of Washington predicted today.

"Our policy is not to issue scare announcements but the outlook for this weekend looks serious," said William Merry.

"The shutdown has already begun in the outlying areas and there is evidence it is beginning in Seattle," he said.

Meanwhile, motorists mobbed the tanks in California Tuesday after filfling station oerators who had been closed for four days to protest the freeze on gasoline prices reopened, pronouncing their protest a "tremendous success."

Gas Main Blast, Fire Gut Three City Shops

Firemen's hoses battle flames destroying three stores and a hall on Oak Bay Avenue

By DON VIPOND and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

A city shoemaker was badly injured this morning when a gas explosion blasted his tiny store on Oak Bay Avenue, triggering a fierce fire which destroyed two other stores and damaged a church hall.

The blast, at 9:40 a.m., turned the store at 1840 Oak Bay Ave. into a pile of kindling, shattering windows in the vicinity. Within seconds flames swept through the debris, spreading swiftly to an adjacent toy store and beauty parlor which eventually were destroyed.

A Ukrainian church hall on the other side of the shoe repair store, apparents empty at the time, was severely damaged.

Crews for B.C. Hydro have been blasting a trench for underground wiring along Oak Bay Avenue in front of the fire site. Plumes of flame from gas mains alongside the trench fed the fire.

Asked the cause of the explosion, city fire chief Eric Simmons said: "There is no doubt about it — the (gas) main was ruptured."

Ted Nies, manager of the Oak Bay Pet Hospital, right across the street, said after the blast he ran to the rear of the wreckage where the shoe store had stood.

He could hear a man's voice inside yelling "help, help" but there was no way he could dig into the debris to reach him.

The blast broke all but two of the windows in the pet hospital.

Ron Dunnett, one of the workers in the trench, was in a manhole when the explosion occurred. He said one of his co-workers was caught in another manhole but is reported to have been rescued.

"The blast was so strong it knocked a bottle of shampoo from one of the stores across the street," Dunnett said.

Dunnett also said a gas crew cut the gas line and sealed it within minutes after the explosion.

Art Hepting of the Oak Bay Avenue Shell Station, located next to the fire, said he was first aware of the explosion when a glass window in his station shattered.

"There was billowing smoke everywhere and fire trucks arriving and people arriving," he said.

The city's yellow fire trucks and police cruisers clogged the street, with officers repeatedly warning a swelling crowd to get back because of the possibility of another explosion.

A maze of fire hoses were linked to every hydrant in the area as firemen poured streams on to the blaze without checking it.

Proprietors of The Toy Shop, alongside the blasted building, were on vacation at the time and the store was closed.

One early report said the explosion was in the Little Wonder Confectionery. Also destroyed was the Renee Beauty Parlor.

Veterinarian Allan Hoey, who was operating at the time of the explosion, said immediately following the blast came the crash of shattering glass at the front of the hospital.

He ran to the waiting room, fearing one of his receptionists might have been cut but she was uninjured. Then he noticed flames spurting from the trench across the street and the building behind it shattered.

He returned to his surgery, scrubbed again and completed the operation.

Ed Norman, who lives in an apartment across the intersection from the fire, said the blast shook his windows. The

OIL SPILL 'COULDN'T HAPPEN'

Times News Services

The federal transport department opened an inquiry Tuesday night into the oil spill "which shouldn't have happened," resulting from the ship collision in Vancouver harbor.

"It's incomprehenhensible to me how the two ships collided in the first place," Environment Minister Jack Davis said after examining the site.

"They would see each other . . . the weather was good . . . I just don't understand it."

S. T. Clarke, chairmn of the Pacific Pilotage Authority, said pilots were aboard both vessels when they collided.

Thousands of feet of oil booms, oil slicker-lickers, truck-loads of peat moss and hundreds of students were thrown into the fight to keep area beaches clean after

Resignation Up to Agnew

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House said today that vice-president Agnew has discussed the possibility of resigning with President Nixon. A spokesman said Nixon neither encouraged nor discouraged him.

Confirmation by deputy press secretary Gerald Warren of recent rumours that Agnew had considered resigning came moments after speaker Carl Albert swiftly turned down Agnew's request that the house of representatives rather than the courts undertake an investigation of political wrongdoing against the vice-president.

Warren said that Agnew's decision to try to get the house to open an inqulry into kickback allegations against him was made solely by the vice-president.

Although Nixon discussed various options with Agnew in four meetings they have had since the allegations were announced, he exerted no pressure for any particular course, Warren said.

Warren said for the first time that the two had discussed the possibility of Agnew resigning for the first time when they met Tuesday morning, prior to Agnew's request to the house for an investigation.

Agnew requested the House hearing in a letter to Albert.

He contended that a grand jury investigating the same allegations has no constitutional authority to do so as long as he is in office. The grand jury investigation is scheduled to begin Thursday.

After a conference this morning with House Democratic leaders, Albert handed

Hughes Tried To 'Own' Nixon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Hughes gave $100,000 in cash to Bebe Rebozo for President Nixon in 1969, and $50,000 in 1968 to then vice-president Hubert Humphrey because he wanted to "own the president," a former top aide to the billionaire recluse has charged.

The accusation was made by Robert Maheu, who is involved in a bitter legal battle with Hughes.

In court depositions made public Tuesday, Maheu said that two suitcases, each containing $50,000 in cash, had been given to Rebozo, Nixon's close friend.

Maheu said he and Danner gave Rebozo the second suitcase in 1970 at Key Biscayne, Fla., where Rebozo has a home.

He said he gave Humphirey $50,000 in cash during the 1968 presidential campaign.

Hughes also acted to give Sen. Robert Kennedy $25,000 that year, but Kennedy was assassinated before the money was delivered, so the cash went to Democratic national committee chairman Larry O'Brien instead, Maheu said.

Maheu said Hughes wanted to "own the prsident, choose his successor, members of the supreme court, senators, congressmen and politicians at all levels."

Maheu also referred to "a handwritten memorandum from Mr. Hughes wherein Mr. Hughes was asking me to make a million dollar payoff to a president of the United States." the incident took place in 1957, when Lyndon Johnson was president.

Storms Kill Five

OMAHA, Neb. (CP) — Five persons were believed killed and scores injured Tuesday night as 20 or more tornadoes hit the central U.S. plains.

Heavy rains falling on water-logged ground started floods in Kansas and Nebraska.

As many as 100 were injured, and communications were knocked out, a Red Cross spokesman said.

The spokesman said there was no electricity within a 12-to 15-mile radius of Clay Center. Fifty buildings in the town had major damage.

Meanwhile, Hurricane Irah whipped across the peninsula of Baja California and churned toward the Mexican mainland today, carrying fierce rains and winds expected to top 100 miles an hour.

Bourassa Calls Vote

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Premier Robert Bourassa has called a Quebec general election for Oct. 29, dissolving the Quebec national assembly after only 3½ years in office.

The announcement came as no surprise to the province's three opposition parties.

"It was evident this government could not take it any more," said Opposition leader Gabriel Loubier of the Union Nationale.

The Bourassa government is paralysed by internal dissension and scandals, said Loubier, calling the election "a cover-up operation."

The Liberals also were trying to cover up the failure of the James Bay power project and their promise of 100,000 new jobs made in the last provincial election, he said.

The Parti Quebecois greeted the election with a statement saying "the Liberals have acted more out of panic than strategy."

The statement criticized Premier Bourassa for making the election announcement "in a pre-recorded speech using a studio that is sheltered from the indiscreet questions of reporters."

"The Liberals are coming

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Atlantic Richfield (Arco) refinery at Cherry Point has doubled its number of tanker deliveries through the Strait of Juan de Fuca following a cutback on crude oil available by pipeline from Canada.

A company spokesman said at least three tankers bring crude oil to the refinery each month now, instead of the previous rate of three every two months.

The refinery uses 100,000 barrels of crude oil daily, and gets 58,000 barrels per day from the Trans Mountain Pipeline running into Washington from British Columbia.

The Canadian government has reduced the flow of oil into Washington State by 20 per cent in order to assure that Canadian refineries have adequate supplies.

The cutback at Arco is 15,000 barrels per day.

The tankers bringing oil to Cherry Point from the Middle East are about 70,000 tons, with the largest being 120,000 tons. The largest vessels carry just under one million barrels of crude oil.

The 477,000-ton supertankers expected to carry Alaska oil to Cherry Point will hold 3.5 million barrels.

The company said it was forced to bring increased oil by tankers as a direct result of Canadian government policies in cutting back its pipeline supplies.

"We have to get the oil from somewhere," a spokesman for Arco said. "If it doesn't come by pipeline it has to come by tanker."

The company lodged a protest with Ottawa saying it should get special consideration because it supplies CP Air with jet fuel. The protest, however, was rejected.

Meanwhile, three other Washington State refineries are also affected by the Canadian pipeline cutback.

Texaco, which has a refinery at Anacortes, said it has not had to seek tanker supplies so far but will have to when plant expansion is completed in April.

Shell at Anacortes and Mobile Oil at Ferndale also say they will have to study the possibility of bringing crude oil in by tankers because of the Canadian cutback.

Sidney Man Released

Capt. and Mrs. William Paterson, 2277 Gail Place, Sidney, received word early today from Ottawa that their 20-year-old son Bill Jr. is now in the hands of Canadian officials in Santiago.

Bill was among the 1,000 people detained for questioning by the new government which seized power Sept. 11.

The other two Canadians who were held also have been released. They are Robert Everton, of Burnaby and Michael Beaubien, of Montreal.

"We heard at 8 a.m. today that Bill had been freed and he has to get out of the country as quickly as possible," Mrs. Paterson said.

A Canadian embassy official in Santiago said the three men were tired and hungry when they arrived at the embassy, but they had not been mistreated.

"We're hoping and praying that Canadian officials are telling the truth when they say our son is all right," Mrs. Paterson said Tuesday afternoon, a short time after learning of her son's detention.

"They have told us that he is all right, that he hasn't been abused and that he is only being detained for interrogation," she said.

He spent almost a year in New Zealand and then went to

Skylab Team Wobbly

Times News Services

The only apparent problem facing the three Skylab astronauts after their record 59 days in space is unsteadiness as a result of their time in weightlessness, according to doctors aboard the recovery ship USS New Orleans.

Alan Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma splashed down in the Pacific about 230 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif., on schedule at 3:20 Tuesday afternoon.

Lousma was the first one out of the command craft, and he had to hold onto the hatch door before walking to a chair set up on a folklift truck. When he walked, he wobbled and he had to be helped into the chair by two space agency doctors.

Carriott came out next, and while he looked a little more chipper than Lousma he wobbled too. Bean was last man out, and like Lousma had to be helped into his chair.

Doctors fully expect the three astronauts to feel badly for at least three days and perhaps as long as a week. They don't expect them to regain all the weight, red blood cells and plasma and muscle tone they've lost for as long as a month.

● Removal of federal and provincial sales taxes on building supplies was asked by new Socred member Bill Bennett, echoing his famous father's appeals of the past. Page 21.

● New legislation will add four directors to the board of B.C. Railway bringing the total to nine, and allowing members of the general public to be appointed. Page 49.

Double Life for CDC Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corporation will establish offices in Toronto and Vancouver with its top officers attempting to divide their time between both places, corporation president H. A. Hampson said Tuesday.

He said the corporation has taken space in the Marathon Building in downtown Vancouver and will also open an office in Toronto and will close its present Ottawa office.

The two-office set up is apparently designed to go part way to meeting a promise made by Prime Minister Trudeau in November, 1971, that the corporation's headquarters would be moved to Vancouver from Ottawa.

Hampson said in an interview that three corporation officials would spend most of their time in the Vancouver office and another three would work in Toronto with both he and corporation chairman Marshall Crowe attempting to divide their time between the two offices.

"Toronto seemed the logical place for an office, particularly if we are going to be involved in a share issue next year," said Hampson. "A lot of my time will be spent on that project in Toronto.

"A tremendous amount of travelling is involved in this job at present and we don't think of any one place as a permanent office," said Hampson.

Prisoner Tries Soapbox Exit

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli prisoner tried an unusual jailbreak Tuesday. He submitted his name for election to parliament.

A Supreme Court judge told Israel Radio that if elected, the prisoner would automatically be released. But he would not be allowed to campaign personally.

The judge did not identify the would-be politician and it was not known if he had paid the registration fee of $3,783.

The Canadian Cop-Out —Concorde's New Look

They once had the bold eyes of eagles. Now they've the doubting eyes of chickens. And here we go again with our annual report on the folly of Air Canada and CP Air in turning a blind eye on the fast-approaching day of supersonic flight.

One of the editors I trust most, seeing this latest material on my desk, asks, "Do you really think any one in Victoria cares a hoot about the Concorde?" Well, maybe not. But I think we ought to care and we ought to care out loud that our two international airlines have put chicken-hearted caution ahead of the planning that might get us in early on the new age of flight.

Sometime in the summer of 1975 Air France will inaugurate faster-than-sound passenger flights between Paris, New York and Washington, between Paris and Tokyo by way of Siberia, between Paris and Buenos Aires by way of Dakar. At about the same time BOAC will begin a regular trans-Atlantic service between London and New York.

We now see, just over the horizon, the 12-hour world in which no major population centre will be more than half a day's flying from any other. Yet the executives of our two major airlines not only have failed to anticipate it, but continually bad-mouth the wonderful airplane that will make it possible.

So far as I can find out there was not a single Canadian aviation man present when Concorde made its historic debut on American soil last week at the dedication ceremonies of the new Dallas-Fort Worth airport. But there were plenty of the top brass of Braniff International which just happens to be CP Air's main competition on its Latin-American routes.

Consider, just for a moment, that first flight to the U.S. Concorde 02, built in France, opened up the Paris-Caracas route by a six-hour and 15-minute trans-Atlantic flight, as compared to the 12 hours it takes in the present-day jets. It then flew the 2,559 miles from Caracas to Dallas in two hours and 22 minutes, much of it at 57,000 feet and a speed of 1,360 miles per hour. The reporters and aviation men who were aboard were astonished at the quiet and absence of any sensation of speed when they de-planed.

It isn't simply that this is the swiftest of airplanes, though speed is now, and always has been, the name of the game in commercial flying. It will be one of the safest airliners of all time, the most tested airplane in the history of flight. Already the four prototype Concordes assembled by the British and French partners, have logged some two thousand hours of flight, more than a thousand of them at supersonic speeds. It will be a quieter, more fool-proof flying machine than any of today's jets.

Air Canada dropped its options and CP Air backed away from the beginning purely because of arithmetic. Their computers have told them that the airplane will be more expensive to operate, thus require higher fares. They ignore entirely the fact that even today first class seats are heavily booked, that businessmen who think of time as money will gladly pay a premium rate to cut their flying hours in half. Prime Minister Edward Heath predicts that it will be "the prestige way to fly" when they go into service and, for once, I think he is right.

Despite the American pressure groups, which brought about the cancellation of the United States' SST program, there are some long second-thoughts by the most knowledgable men in aviation.

James P. Woolsey, writing in the Air Transport World, puts it this way: "Concorde's introduction could generate more excitement than the first 707, and could spark a renewed public interest in the wonders of air travel. The industry needs it. The whole industry will benefit from it. And there will be significances attached to which airlines are supersonic and which are not.

"In the years since the introduction of jet service," Woolsey goes on, "there has developed a sameness throughout the industry. Everybody has basically the same airplanes, the same prices, the same everything. Now they are working for essentially the same schedules. In one swoop the Concorde will blow all the dust out of the airline industry. For the first time in too many years somebody will really have something different to compete with. We welcome it. We think the public will too. In an ironic twist, it might just be the Concorde that brings back the good old days."

And John McCutcheon, writing in the Chicago Tribune, says this: "A number of arguments have been raised against allowing this service (Concorde's flights to the United States) and most of them are bad. The worst ones are those based simply on commercial protectionism. The reasoning is that since the United States chose not to enter the SST market, and since American airlines have chosen not even to buy Concordes, we shouldn't give anybody else a chance to prove that we were wrong. This is a shabby attitude for a country that has always championed free enterprise and competition."

McCutcheon's article was under the heading, "Give Concorde a Chance." That is advice that's now too late for Air Canada and CP Air which have forfeited the golden chance to get in on the ground floor. They truly are chickens in a world of eagles.

ONE MORE YEAR

Victory city council agreed Tuesday to renew the lease on the old Court House in Bastion Square to the Maritime Museum — but only for one year.

During that time the city intends to make strong representations to both the federal and provincial governments, pointing out that Victoria is not prepared to continue its hefty subsidization of a museum which has wider than city significance.

The city's total financial support to the museum is close to $50,000 a year, which Mayor Peter Pollen has noted is three times as much as it spends on its own archives.

In making out the case for federal and provincial assistance to keep the museum alive, Victoria will state its willingness to relocate the museum in the Malahat Building on Wharf Street — for which it is now negotiating a lease with the federal government.

Royal Tour Set

Members of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay councils will tour and inspect the Royal Theatre at 10 a.m. Thursday, to help them decide on the merits of buying the building for $250,000.

The proposal, promoted strongly by Mayor Peter Pollen with the backing of city council, is to purchase and run the theatre as an interim home for the Victoria Symphony and other cultural activities.

Victoria has prepared a feasibility report on the proposition, but Saanich and Oak Bay representatives on Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee said last week their councils required more information before reaching a decision.

In answer to a question at his press conference today, Pollen denied he has any "political motivation" in pushing for the Royal Theatre acquisition to be concluded before the Nov. 17 civic election.

He said the proposal to buy it on an intermunicipal basis does have great importance to the Greater Victoria community, and he considers it would be "grossly unfair" for Victoria to have to buy and operate the theatre alone.

On the upcoming election itself, the mayor said the dearth of announced candidates for the mayoralty or aldermanic seats seems to indicate "we aren't going to have an election at all," in Victoria or neighboring municipalities.

"It's pretty ho-hum politics," he commented.

'Oak Bay Itself Polluting the Beach'

The pollution and silting of the bay near Oak Bay Marina is being caused by inadequate storm drains and municipal dumping, marina president Bob Wright said today.

Replying to accusations that the extension of the marina breakwater and the spur on Mary Tod Island were the causes, Wright said they had, in actual fact, helped clean some of the mess out of the bay.

"During the winter months," Wright said, "Storms and high runoffs result in overflow of the storm drains near Glenlyon School and raw sewage flows into the bay."

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White estimated today it would cost" between $300,000 and $600,000" to correct the situation. This, he said, might be done within two years" if the politicians vote the money."

Wright said he had asked the municipality to stop dumping fill at the marina's parking lot for the past two years, but without success.

"They were still dumping up until Monday," he said, "They had rip-rapped all but one corner and were dumping at that corner where there was no heavy rock to prevent it being carried away by the strong tidal action.

"We could see what was happening. They had a perpetual dump there. One day we watched and we could see a long finger of clay-colored water being whipped out and around and through the bay."

Oak Bay council voted Monday to have the corner of the parking lot rip-rapped to prevent any further erosion of the fill into the water.

An independent study carried out by the University of Victoria in order to determine if the marina is polluting the area has failed to do so.

In its summary it states:

"Coliform counts vary with tidal height. As tidal deight decreases, coliform count increases, Sealand does not appear to contribute to the fecal pollution of Oak Bay Marina.

"Not only would this study be of interest to Sealand, which is vitally concerned with the health of its animals, but also indicates a need for tidal height standardization of public health sampling techniques."

Sealand curator John Colby says that daily monitoring of the water at the marina has proved that the breakwater extension and spur has helped cleanse the area through increased tidal strength, that also flushes into the bay, creating a back eddy that takes out some of the residue on the beach.

He said the $50,0000 hydraulic study, carried out by a Port Coquitlam company, Canada Hydraulics for the federal public works department, had shown that this would happen.

He said the green algae that residents had seen on the beach was "very definitely possible growth" that had been contained in the fill swept from the parking lot into the water.

"When people are testing to see what impact variables have on the environment," Colby said, "the best way in the world is to use a broad range of animals.

"With delicate octopuses, fish and other wildlife to worry about, we have the greatest stake of all in making sure the bay is kept clean."

Colby said that in the five years he had been at Sealand the lowest mortality rate had been recorded since the breakwater extension was completed this spring.

And Yet Another Study?

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The chief librarian has asked for a staff survey just three years after the $12,000 Woods, Gordon survey that led to the firing of then chief librarian John Lort.

The board will make a decision at its next meeting.

Machin said the system would be carried out in three stages. The first would be the interviewing of all personnnel — maintenance, clerical and librarians — and "the identification of the primary and secondary needs of the system." It would also include "the gaining of acceptance for changes from the present system."

The second stage, he said, would be "the design of the system and the necessary forms, together with a comprehensive write-up of the method of evaluating the employees. Interim meetings would be held with those responsible for evaluation in order to ensure a common understanding of the appraisal process."

The study would cost approximately $5,000.

Observing that Machin's company had been used by Saanich and had done "a very fine job," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry asked why Miller had asked Machin to present his proposals and not asked other companies to present theirs.

"Generally, municipalities have various proposals from various firms," he said.

Miller said it was because Machin't type of company was the only one with headquarters in Victoria. Machin said he welcomed competition, "because we are highly competitive."

Newberry said another study so soon after the Woods, Gordon one would be "too much in the eyes of the public at least."

He added, "Going out on the floor and interviewing all the people like Woods, Gordon did — I just think it's too much."

"I can see it (the study) might have some benefit," Brian Tobin sad, "but have we a problem from which we're suffering that we have to have it — or is it another pretty study?"

"That's a pretty loaded question," replied Miller, "Certainly people we have are performing well — if they are in the right jobs."

Miller, who said the study would be on everyone, including himself, added he did not agree with all the Woods, Gordon report's findings.

He specifically criticized the fact it had resulted in staff being reduced "very drastically."

Miller said evaluation of personnel would be carried out over a period of between six and nine months, based on initial interviews.

Asked if the study would get adverse reaction from the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Miller replied that he didn't think so — similar studies in other areas had not resulted in union reaction.

Writ Seeks Ferry Strike Damages

A writ will be filed in Suprefe Court here today by a group of 30 Vancouver Island businessmen seeking recovery of damages claimed as a result of last month's B.C. Ferries strike.

The writ will be issued against B.C. Government Employees Union, marine branch No. 1, covering unlicensed workers on the government ferry system and the officers of the union local.

Victoria lawyer Louid Lindholm is representing the businessmen, mostly in the tourist industry, who claim they suffered substantial losses as a result of the strike which began Aug. 17 and lasted five days.

Lindholm said today the legal action is only on behalf of the plaintiffs named and not a common action on behalf of all businesses that lost revenue as a result of the walkout.

The amount of the damages sought is unstated.

Law May Force a Repeat Of James Bay Meeting

Tonight's public hearing by Victoria city council on the first stage of its huge James Bay rezoning plan won't be a proper public hearing at all, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen disclosed at his weekly press conference another public hearing may be required because legal advice indicates the full requirements of the Municipal Act were not fulfilled in advertising tonight's hearing.

City officials explained the act requires the elapse of three full working days between notification and the holding of the hearing, so that citizens have ample opportunity to inspect the detailed proposals at City Hall.

The last advertisement in the weekend newspapers appeared in Sunday's Colonist, and by 4:30 p.m. today there would have been three normal working days at City Hall.

But the official view is that today's working day doesn't end until midnight — hence the full intervening period won't have elapsed by the time James Bay residents start trooping into the council chamber for the 8 p.m. public hearing.

Pollen was obviously angry this morning in relating the slip-up to reporters, but had no other comments.

An indication of public interest in the series of James Bay public hearings came Monday night when about 150 residents attended an information meeting sponsored by the James Bay Community Association.

LIBRARY WANTS SOME OF THAT 'EASY' MONEY

The Greater Victoria Public Library board will apply for an $11,000 Local Initiatives Program grant to assess the needs of the economically, socially and physically handicapped of the area.

The board decided to apply for the grant Tuesday in spite of opposition by two members.

Don Miller, director of library services, said he recommended applying because, "I have in the past two years come in contact with some of the people who received L.I.P. and Opportunities for Youth grants and it was really that that prompted me. . . ."

"I know," retorted Brian Tobin, "The troubadors and the fellas who went to listen to whales in their yacht!"

Tobin said, "People think it's easy money, because it's federal money they think it's not going to cost us anything. I think it's baloney. It's just one more of a thousand of these things that are going on across the country."

Ald Clyde Savage of Victoria contended that the people Miller termed "disadvantaged" probably wouldn't want to use the library services anyhow.

Miller said if the grant was approved a member of the University of Victoria's faculty would act as co-ordinator of the study, the study being carried out by graduate students or unemployed graduates.

The survey would study whether services could be extended to meet the needs of the "chronically unemployed, the unemployable, those who are economically deprived, the physically and mentally handicapped, those in correctional institutions, in hospitals and nursing homes and those receiving treatment for alcohol and drug addiction."

Miller said that consideration should also be given to supplying service to Indian reservations and to ethnic groups which may not be integrated into the life of the community.

Ald. Alan Newberry of Saanich said he was particularly concerned about the needs of the unemployed.

"Libraries are very middle class institutions," he said, "I'm concerned about those people who are not middle class people and don't come into the library, who are probably afraid to come into the library."

Ald. Malcolm Anderson of Victoria said "Budgets are fixed for L.I.P. grants in this area and the money should be spent as sensibly as possible. This may be one of the better uses."

Miller stressed the study would not result in a need for more facilities and staff.

"What we will be asking is how we can provide, services to more people with our present facilities," he said.

"I am not against extending library services," Tobin replied, "But my point is I think it could be done much more cheaply and on our own hook."

Separate School System Feared

Fear of establishing a separate school system within the district was expressed today by Sooke school board chairman Fred Willway as the defence department moves ahead with plans for its own French language program.

Introduction of the French program for some 30 children of CFB Esquimalt personnel at John Stubbs Elemetary would have been "the thin edge of the wedge of a separate school system," Willway said.

This fear led the board to put size restrictions on a French program for John Stubbs when it was approved by the board earlier this month, said Willway.

The restrictions were unacceptable to the defence department, which rejected the school board offer and has opened its own 100 per cent French school for 31 students.

Base commander Capt. G. H. Hayes said the school will continue to operate unless the controversy can be settled.

The uproar over whether the French program for military children should be offered at John Stubbs led to the resignation Tuesday of Sooke school trustee Howard Drummond.

Willway said he would have resigned, too, over the matter, except his term of office is over this year and he's not running again.

"As far as we were concerned this was B.C. and in B.C. we learn in English," Willway said. "If they want to learn Spanish, fine. If they want to learn French, fine."

"We could also see segregation of pupils, which we don't like."

Willway said the board was upset to find that the DND had already planned three classrooms while the board was deciding what to do.

"Mr. Drummond was quite upset and the board was upset. I stated publicly that I was upset," he said.

"We were led up the garden path."

The department of national defence has been trying to arrange for a French-language program with the Sooke school district operating the program and DND paying.

The school board rejected the DND proposal Sept. 11. But following a meeting Sept. 14 with department of education and DND officials, the board was persuaded to change its mind.

At a special meeting that day the board approved a modified French-language program at John Stubbs, by a four-to-three vote.

This modified program — which restricted the program to a maximum 35 students, two classrooms and two teachers — was rejected by DND, which opened its own school Sept. 17.

Willway says as far as he's concerned, the matter is closed.

"I'm not going to call any more special meetings on it."

Hayes said today he has accepted the possibility he'll have to assume the role of school board chairman this year and form a board to oversee the new DND school.

SEATTLE GAS PUMPS IDLE

Times News Services

Eighty-five to 90 per cent of service stations in the Puget Sound basin will be closed by Friday unless the Cost of Living Council "stops nit-picking and foot-dragging" and allows gasoline price increases, the director of the Automobile Club of Washington predicted today.

"Our policy is not to issue scare announcements but the outlook for this weekend looks serious," said William Merry.

"The shutdown has already begun in the outlying areas and there is evidence it is beginning in Seattle," he said.

Meanwhile, motorists mobbed the tanks in California Tuesday after filling station operators who had been closed for four days to protest the freeze on gasoline prices reopened, pronouncing their protest a "tremendous success."

Gas Main Blast, Fire Gut Four City Shops

Firemen's hoses battle flames destroying four stores and a hall on Oak Bay Avenue

By DON VIPOND and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

A city shoemaker was badly injured this morning when a gas explosion blasted his tiny store on Oak Bay Avenue, triggering a fierce fire which destroyed three other stores and damaged a church hall.

In fair condition at Victoria General Hospital is Perikles Parisis, 53, of 867 Daffodil. He has multiple burns and cuts, a broken arm and leg.

Parisis was finally pulled from the wreckage by Capt. Robert Cherneff, Tommy Black from the city fire department and an unidentified civilian.

The blast, at 9:40 a.m., turned the store at 1840 Oak Bay Ave. into a pile of kindling, shattering windows in the vicinity. Within seconds flames swept through the debris, spreading swiftly to an adjacent toy store and beauty parlor which eventually were destroyed.

A Ukrainian church hall on the other side of the shoe repair store, apparently empty at the time, was severely damaged.

Crews for B.C. Hydro have been blasting a trench for underground wiring along Oak Bay Avenue in front of the fire site. Plumes of flame from gas mains alongside the trench fed the fire.

Asked the cause of the explosion, city fire chief Eric Simmons said: "There is no doubt about it — the (gas) main was ruptured."

Ted Nies, manager of the Oak Bay Pet Hospital, right across the street, said after the blast he ran to the rear of the wreckage where the shoe store had stood.

He could hear a man's voice inside yelling "help, help" but there was no way he could dig into the debris to reach him.

The blast broke all but two of the windows in the pet hospital.

Ron Dunnett, one of the workers in the trench, was in a manhole when the explosion occurred. He said one of his co-workers was caught in another manhole but is reported to have been rescued.

"The blast was so strong it knocked a bottle of shampoo from one of the stores across the street," Dunnett said.

Dunnett also said a gas crew cut the gas line and sealed it within minutes after the explosion.

The city's yellow fire trucks and police cruisers clogged the street, with officers repeatedly warning a swelling crowd to get back because of the possibility of another explosion.

A maze of fire hoses were linked to every hydrant in the area as firemen poured streams on to the blaze without checking it.

Proprietors of The Toy Shop, alongside the blasted building, were on vacation at the time and the store was closed.

One early report said the explosion was in the Little Wonder Confectionery. Also destroyed was the Renee Beauty Parlor.

Veterinarian Alan Hoey, who was operating at the time of the explosion, said immediately following the blast came the crash of shattering glass at the front of the hospital.

He ran to the waiting room, fearing one of his receptionists might have been cut but she was uninjured. Then he noticed flames spurting from the trench across the street and the building behind it shattered.

He returned to his surgery, scrubbed again and completed the operation.

Ed Norman, who lives in an apartment across the intersection from the fire, said the blast shook his windows. The

OIL SPILL 'COULDN'T HAPPEN'

The federal transport department opened an inquiry Tuesday night into the oil spill "which shouldn't have happened," resulting from the ship collision in Vancouver harbor.

"It's incomprehensible to me how the two ships collided in the first place," Environment Minister Jack Davis said after examining the site.

"They would see each other . . . the weather was good . . . I just don't understand it."

S. T. Clarke, chairmn of the Pacific Pilotage Authority, said pilots were aboard both vessels when they collided.

Resignation Up to Agnew

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The White House said today that vice-president Agnew has discussed the possibility of resigning with President Nixon. A spokesman said Nixon neither encouraged nor discouraged him.

Confirmation by deputy press secretary Gerald Warren of recent rumours that Agnew had considered resigning came moments after speaker Carl Albert swiftly turned down Agnew's request that the house of representatives rather than the courts undertake an investigation of political wrongdoing against the vice-president.

Warren said that Agnew's decision to try to get the house to open an inquiry into kickback allegations against him was made solely by the vice-president.

Although Nixon discussed various options with Agnew in four meetings they have had since the allegations were announced, he exerted no pressure for any particular course, Warren said.

Warren said for the first time that the two had discussed the possibility of Agnew resigning for the first time when they met Tuesday morning, prior to Agnew's request to the house for an investigation.

Agnew requested the House hearing in a letter to Albert.

He contended that a grand jury investigating the same allegations has no constitutional authority to do so as long as he is in office. The grand jury investigation is scheduled to begin Thursday.

After a conference this morning with House Democratic leaders, Albert handed

Bourassa Calls Vote

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Premier Robert Bourassa has called a Quebec general election for Oct. 29, dissolving the Quebec national assembly after only 3½ years in office.

The announcement came as no surprise to the province's three opposition parties.

"It was evident this government could not take it any more," said Opposition leader Gabriel Loubier of the Union Nationale.

The Bourassa government is paralysed by internal dissension, and scandals, said Loubier, calling the election "a cover-up operation."

The Liberals also were trying to cover up the failure of the James Bay power project and their promise of 100,000 new jobs made in the last provincial election, he said.

The Parti Quebecois greeted the election with a statement saying "the Liberals have acted more out of panic than strategy."

The statement criticized Premier Bourassa for making the election announcement "in a pre-recorded speech using a studio that is sheltered from the indiscreet questions of reporters."

Tanker Runs Doubled

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The Atlantic Richfield (Arco) refinery at Cherry Point has doubled its number of tanker deliveries through the Strait of Juan de Fuca following a cutback on crude oil available by pipeline from Canada.

A company spokesman said at least three tankers bring crude oil to the refinery each month now, instead of the previous rate of three every two months.

The refinery uses 100,000 barrels of crude oil daily, and gets 58,000 barrels per day from the Trans Mountain Pipeline running into Washington from British Columbia.

The Canadian government has reduced the flow of oil into Washington State by 20 per cent in order to assure that Canadian refineries have adequate supplies.

The cutback at Arco is 15,000 barrels per day.

The tankers bringing oil to Cherry Point from the Middle East are about 70,000 tons, with the largest being 120,000 tons. The largest vessels carry just under one million barrels of crude oil.

The 477,000-ton supertankers expected to carry Alaska oil to Cherry Point will hold 3.5 million barrels.

The company said it was forced to bring increased oil by tankers as a direct result of Canadian government policies in cutting back its pipeline supplies.

"We have to get the oil from somewhere," a spokesman for Arco said. "If it doesn't come by pipeline it has to come by tanker."

The company lodged a protest with Ottawa saying it should get special consideration because it supplies CP Air with jet fuel. The protest, however, was rejected.

Meanwhile, three other Washington State refineries are also affected by the Canadian pipeline cutback.

Texaco, which has a refinery at Anacortes, said it has not had to seek tanker supplies so far but will have to when plant expansion is completed in April.

Shell at Anacortes and Mobile Oil at Ferndale also say they will have to study the possibility of bringing crude oil in by tankers because of the Canadian cutback.

Hughes Tried To 'Own' Nixon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Hughes gave $100,000 in cash to Bebe Rebozo for President Nixon in 1969, and $50,000 in 1968 to then vice-president Hubert Humphrey because he wanted to "own the president," a former top aide to the billionaire recluse has charged.

The accusation was made by Robert Maheu, who is involved in a bitter legal battle with Hughes.

In court depositions made public Tuesday, Maheu said that two suitcases, each containing $50,000 in cash, had been given to Rebozo, Nixon's close friend.

Richard Danner, a Hughes aide who is now general manager of the Hughes-owned Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., gave Rebozo the first suitcase at the Western White House in 1969, Maheu said.

Maheu said he and Danner gave Rebozo the second suitcase in 1970 at Key Biscayne, Fla., where Rebozo has a home.

He said he gave Humphrey $50,000 in cash during the 1968 presidential campaign.

Hughes also acted to give Sen. Robert Kennedy $25,000 that year, but Kennedy was assassinated before the money was delivered, so the cash went to Democratic national committee chairman Larry O'Brien instead, Maheu said.

Maheu said Hughes wanted to "own the president, choose his successor, members of the supreme court, senators, congressmen and politicians at all levels."

Maheu also referred to "a handwritten memorandum from Mr. Hughes wherein Mr. Hughes was asking me to make a million dollar payoff to a president of the United States." the incident took place in 1957, when Lyndon Johnson was president.

Sidney Man Released

A Sidney man, one of three Canadians held by military authorities in Santiago after the Chilean coup has been released to the Canadian embassy.

Capt. and Mrs. William Paterson, 2277 Gail Place, Sidney, received word early today from Ottawa that their 20-year-old son Bill Jr. is now in the hands of Canadian officials in Santiago.

Bill was among the 1,000 people detained for questioning by the new government which seized power Sept. 11.

The other two Canadians who were held also have been released. They are Robert Everton, of Burnaby and Michael Beaubien, of Montreal.

"We heard at 8 a.m. today that Bill had been freed and he has to get out of the country as quickly as possible," Mrs. Paterson said.

A Canadian embassy official in Santiago said the three men were tired and hungry when they arrived at the embassy, but they had not been mistreated.

"We're hoping and praying that Canadian officials are telling the truth when they say our son is all right," Mrs. Paterson said Tuesday afternoon, a short time after learning of her son's detention.

"They have told us that he is all right, that he hasn't been abused and that he is only being detained for interrogation," she said.

He spent almost a year in New Zealand and then went to

Skylab Team Wobbly

Times News Services

The only apparent problem facing the three Skylab astronauts after their record 59 days in space is unsteadiness as a result of their time in weightlessness, according to doctors aboard the recovery ship USS New Orleans.

Alan Bean, Owen Garriott and Jack Lousma splashed down in the Pacific about 230 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif., on schedule at 3:20 Tuesday afternoon.

Lousma was the first one out of the command craft, and he had to hold onto the hatch door before walking to a chair set up on a folklift truck. When he walked, he wobbled and he had to be helped into the chair by two space agency doctors.

Carriott came out next, and while he looked a little more chipper than Lousma he wobbled too. Bean was last man out, and like Lousma had to be helped into his chair.

Doctors fully expect the three astronauts to feel badly for at least three days and perhaps as long as a week. They don't expect them to regain all the weight, red blood cells and plasma and muscle tone they've lost for as long as a month.

Double Life for CDC Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corporation will establish offices in Toronto and Vancouver with its top officers attempting to divide their time between both places, corporation president H. A. Hampson said Tuesday.

He said the corporation has taken space in the Marathon Building in downtown Vancouver and will also open an office in Toronto and will close its present Ottawa office.

The two-office set up is apparently designed to go part way to meeting a promise made by Prime Minister Trudeau in November, 1971, that the corporation's headquarters would be moved to Vancouver from Ottawa.

Hampson said in an interview that three corporation officials would spend most of their time in the Vancouver office and another three would work in Toronto with both he and corporation chairman Marshall Crowe attempting to divide their time between the two offices.

"Toronto seemed the logical place for an office, particularly if we are going to be involved in a share issue next year," said Hampson. "A lot of my time will be spent on that project in Toronto.

"A tremendous amount of travelling is involved in this job at present and we don't think of any one place as a permanent office," said Hampson.

Ireland's 'Berlin Wall' Seals Off Ancient Bridge

By COLIN FROST

PETTIGO, Ireland (AP) — Ireland's version of the Berlin Wall, locally known as the concrete curtain, is 24 feet wide and three feet high. It blocks off a bridge.

It's about the only place you can actually see the Irish border, which twists and turns through 260 miles of green countryside.

Here in Pettigo, however, marking the border is simple. It runs along the Termon River, a trout stream which cuts the village in two.

About 950 villagers live on the County Donegal side of the stream in the Irish republic. About 200 are in County Fermanagh in Northern Ireland and are British subjects.

This division made little difference until the current bout of Ireland's troubles came to formerly peaceful Pettigo.

A bomb planted by Irish Republican Army guerrillas from the southern side wrecked a grocery store in the north. And then the wall went up.

WALLED OFF FAST

The British army swooped in on the morning of Sept. 17. Royal Engineers got to work with pneumatic drills and concrete mixers and the wall was in place by mid-day, neatly sealing off the 18th century bridge across the Termon.

At first the villagers were not sure what to make of it. The wall, it seemed, would oblige them to use the other bridge 80 yards away. That would mean passing through customs, British on the north side, Irish on the south, and add a bit to the weekly grocery bills.

"Butter 20 pence a pound up here, 28 in the Free State," she said.

The Irish republic is still called the Free State by most people here even though the name was dropped officially a quarter-century ago.

One penny—called a pee — is 2½ cents, so on butter alone a big family makes a reasonable saving.

"Cigarettes," said Bernadette, "30 pee here, 32 down below. Sugar 10 pee here, 11 pee over there. Stamps 3½ pee here, 5 pee there."

Trade was slack at the Northern Cash Stores the day the wall went up. Bernadette, who lives in the south, had to cross the official bridge to get to work.

GO OVER WALL

The girl in Johnston's grocery, 50 yards away on the southern side, shrugged it off as one of those things.

"You'd be surprised how much butter we sell," she said defiantly.

The Royal Tank Regiment, responsible for security on the northern side, handed out leaflets telling the northern villagers: "Due to terrorist attacks we have to improve your safety and restrict the terrorists' freedom of movement.

"We don't want to cause unnecessary inconvenience."

As a result, the IRA has lost an escape route and Ireland's pig smugglers have lost a favorite crossing point.

SMUGGLING WAS EASY

Thousands of smuggled pigs cross the Irish border every week, heading north or south according to variations in support prices.

It's an easy living, since neither government, British nor Irish, has yet found a foolproof way of distinguishing between a northern monarchist pig or a southern republican pig.

Not that the smugglers will be hurt much. At 8 o'clock sharp every evening the customs men shut shop and go home.

Greek Students Protest

ATHENS (UPI) — Police Tuesday dispersed demonstrating students who had tried to hold a meeting at the University of Athens law school, the scene of violent clashes earlier this year.

Police estimated the number of demonstrators at 200, but witnesses said there were almost 400 there. The students shouted anti-government and anti-American slogans.

The students said they wanted to protest the government's cancellation of army service deferments for several students.

"Any such meeting will be against university laws," the university senate said.

Denied entrance for the meeting, the students organized a demonstration, shouting "Papadopoulos, the people do not want you!"; "Americans out!" and "This is not Chile!"

Police met the demonstrators near the ministry of the interior and dispersed them forcibly but without using clubs, witnesses said.

Blacks Quit IMF Session

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Black African delegates led a walkout today from the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank when South Africa's finance minister began to speak.

There might have been more protesters, but Nicolaas Diederichs, spoke first on the morning program and many delegates had not arrived.

The others included India's ficance minister, Y. B. Chavan, and representatives of Rwanda, Tanzania, Republic of Congo, Turkey, Iraqu, Jordan and Bangladesh.

Diederichs continued to speak:

"If that is their way of expressing their feelings, then they may certainly do so," he had said earlier.

When he finished speaking, the delegates returned to the hall.

Meanwhile, the industrial countries tentatively agreed to contribute another $4.5 billion over the next three years to provide low-interest loans to developing nations.

The decision, which still requires some further minor negotiations and ratification by each member state, was announced after World Bank chief Robert McNamara warned that chaos might result if the aid funds are withheld.

Canada pledged $274.5 million as a donor member of the International Development Association which forms the low-interest lending subsidiary of the World Bank.

Canada's contribution represents six per cent of the total pledge for the new three-year period.

A further drafting meeting of World Bank members will be required later this week before a full document is drawn up on the new loan pledges but a conference spokesman said Tuesday "no major issues remain to be settled."

Normally donor countries allow themselves a full year to obtain congressional and parliamentary approvals but with the current three-year IDA replenishment expiring next June 30, governments likely will drive hard to meet the new deadline.

The announcement defuses what might have become one of the most controversial issues between the industrial and developing countries.

TSE Trading Halted Over Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Trading in shares of several mining companies with holdings in Ireland was halted on the Toronto Stock Exchange today following the announcement of strict taxes on such companies by the Irish Republic.

A 20-year tax exemption on mining profits, introduced in 1967 by the previous administration, is to be ended. The new taxes could run as high as 50 per cent in some cases.

Companies included in the halt were International Mogul, Northgate, Tara Exploration, Anglo United, Avoca, Irish Copper, Coldstream, Discovery, Barymin and Argosy.

DEEPEST CAVE FOUND BY COLLEGE PROBERS

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A member of a combined cave-exploring expedition from McMaster University, Hamilton, University of Guelph and the Alberta Speleological Society, said Tuesday his group had discovered the deepest known cave in Canada or the United States.

George Tracey of Brampton said the expedition had explored Arctomy's Cave in Mount Robson in British Columbia the first two weeks in August and found it to be about 1,800 feet deep and 1½ miles long.

Since then, the expedition has been compiling its data which it will send to the Eldon Club in England from which the Guinness Books of Records gets many of its facts.

Mr. Tracey said the expedition also found a skeleton, believed to be that of a bear, about 700 feet inside the cave and 250 feet down.

The same team surveyed the Yorkshire Pot in Alberta about seven months ago and found it to be about 1,260 feet deep, Mr. Tracey said. Prior to the Alberta discovery, the deepest known cave had been the Neff Canyon in Utah.

Watchdog Approved

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The editorial division of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers' Association has unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the appointment of an editorial co-ordinator to work for the improvement of editorial quality of Canadian newspapers.

William T. Galt, of The Vancouver Sun, chairman of the editorial division, said the co-ordinator — if approved by the general council — will be appointed to the staff of the CDNPA, which represents 87 of Canada's 113 daily newspapers.

Don't Stone the Crows —They're 'Very Useful'

"Crows are very useful," said Dave Stirling, who is also director of the Canadian Nature Federation.

Stirling was responding to Oak Bay council's discussion Monday of ways to keep down the municipality's crow population.

The municipality has had 17 complaints about noise and nuisance caused by crows this year, and council is considering the possiblity of shooting some of them.

"People in North America are too quick to look on any wild animal as a problem," said Stirling.

"It seems that some people would like to have a nice sterile world with none of these dogs, crows or pigeons."

Crows are clever birds, he said, and they do sometimes beat out smaller birds for food.

"But if it wasn't for the crows the robins would be knee deep and we'd have to be shooting them," he said.

U.S. Says Canada To Be Consulted

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp says he has received assurances from Henry Kissinger that Canada will not be excluded from any grand design the United States contemplates in Western Europe.

Sharp told a news conference Tuesday that the new U.S. state secretary agreed with the position Canada has taken on guarding her Atlantic partnership.

The nine Common Market countries responded with a 22-point declaration of principles, but nowhere was Canada mentioned.

After the text of the declaration was published Monday, Sharp quickly took up the matter with Kissinger, fearing that the U.S. and the Common Market, in setting up their new partnership, would eventually leave Canada out in the cold.

FEARS ALLAYED

Canada is working on her own set of principles which also deals with the Common Market, but within the framework of NATO.

Canada's delegation in NATO has prepared a working paper which includes a statement of principles, a Canadian spokesman said today, but he said it is not yet the official government position.

Sharp himself noted at the news conference that the mechanism for updating the Atlantic partnership already exists in the NATO treaty.

Article 2 of the treaty calls for economic co-operation among the 15 NATO members, among them the Common Market's major members as well as Canada and the U.S.

The Canadian spokesman said the working paper already has been circulated in NATO.

PAVE WAY FOR TALKS

A whole new Canada-U.S. dialogue seemed in the offing in the wake of the Sharp-Kissinger meeting. The two foreign ministers talked for 80 minutes, mostly on international issues.

Bread-and-butter issues such as inflation, energy shortages and oil-pricing policies were temporarily shelved until they can be taken up when there is more time later this fall.

Sharp and Kissinger probably will meet in Washington early in November after Prime Minister Trudeau returns from his China visit.

Sharp further disclosed that Canada also plans to hold a full-fledged ministerial meeting with members of the U.S. cabinet. There hasn't been such a meeting since the last one in Ottawa about three years ago. But the Canadian spokesman said a lot of preparation is needed for this kind of meeting and it may be months away.

Copters Join Search

Three army helicopters were sent from Edmonton today to join the search for two planes missing in northern and central B.C.

A spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria said the helicopters will be used to make deep valley searches. Such forays have been hampered over the past week by low lying clouds and fog.

The helicopters will release three Navy Tracker aircraft from the search. They will return to their base in Victoria and resume routine environment and fisheries patrols on the coast.

The search has entered its eighth day for Neil Carey of North Vancouver, missing on a flight from Quesnel to Terrace, and sixth day for a Navy Tracker with four men aboard that disappeared while searching for Carey.

A rescue official said five military aircraft spent a total of 30 hours hunting for the missing Tracker in the Terrace area Tuesday. Four other military aircraft and eight civilian planes carried out a search of the Quesnel and Vanderhoof areas for Carey.

The spokesman said the area were it is probable the two planes went down will be covered completely three times before any thought is given to abandoning the search.

Director Named For Resthaven

John William Groves, 8598 Bourne Terrace, has been appointed the provincial government representative on the board of directors of Sidney's Resthaven Hospital.

Cabinet orders made public today revealed the appointment which is for a two-year term effective Tuesday.

Air Route Sought

West Coast Air Services has applied to the Air Tansport Committee in Ottawa for permission to operate a twice-daily seaplane service between Victoria and New Westminster.

The application is being opposed by competing airlines and a hearing is expected in spring, with a decision by Ottawa probably one year away.

The Vancouver-based company proposes to fly between the Inner Harbor and the Fraser River.

New Westminster was selected because the Victoria-Vancouver run is already served by Air West and Victoria Flying Services.

Millwright Walkout Slows Alberni Mills

About 400 maintenance men and tradesmen at MacMillan Bloedel's Port Alberni lumber mills failed to report for work today because of a wage revision dispute.

An IWA spokesman said the walkout would last for 24 hours.

Keith Bennett, vice-president of Forest Industrial Relations, said the industry is not compelled to negotiate higher wage rates until June 14, 1974, but had offered new rates to the IWA Tuesday.

Bennett said the industry will not negotiate again with the IWA until "IWA leaders accept responsibility under the collective agreement and restore order to the industry."

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel in Port Alberni said the Somass Sawmill and the Alberni Pacific Sawmill were "slowly closing down" because of the dispute.

Inn Appeal Rejected

An appeal by Mediaeval Inns, 1005 Broad, against a B.C. Labor Relations Board certification decision has been rejected, the labor department announced today.

The board ordered certification last April of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, Local 835, as bargaining agent for employees at the restaurant.

The workshop will open in October with eight students.
